China's Armies Will Crush 'Sellout Peace'

● Simon Malley has just returned from Peking with the first interviews granted by top leaders of China to any foreign correspondent in two years. A veteran newspaperman who for 18 years has covered the United Nations for various African and Asian newspapers, Malley today begins an exclusive 10-part report on his conversations.

By Simon Malley
First of 10 Parts

China will send its vast armies into Vietnam the moment Hanoi is threatened with a "sellout peace," Prime Minister Chou En-lai told me in his first interview with a foreign correspondent in two years.

Chou

He sat with me in his reception room in the Forbidden City of Peking and declared that Hanoi has only to say the word to bring an avalanche of Chinese "volunteers" to its aid.

Ultimately, he predicted, the course of events will result in just that.

In my two-and-one-half hours with the Chinese prime minister and in subsequent interviews with four other top leaders close to Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, I received the fullest and most detailed picture of China's plans since the beginning of the hectic "cultural revolution."

They talked with surprising candor about China's relations with Russia, her role opposing Vietnam peace bids in January, her inner political turmoil, and other issues vital to world peace.

Malley

They even gave me their private prediction on the 1968 presidential elections in the United States.

As a correspondent for the French-language African weekly magazine Jeune Afrique, I had been able to interview Chou En-lai when he made his last visit to North Africa three years ago.

Early this year I inquired through my many friends in Africa and Asia about the possibility of getting a visa to enter China.

They told me that the Chinese had agreed "in principle" to my visit, despite the fact that no visas had been issued

Pearson Sets Monday Meet On War Fear

OTTAWA (CP)—Upset by U Thant's fear that the Vietnam conflict may be the opening stages of a new world war, MPs kept pressure on the government Friday for a formal resolution expressing the Canadian Parliament's views.

* * *

Prime Minister Pearson successfully side-stepped any immediate commitment on such a step early in the day but was later urged to meet leaders of all the political parties next Monday to pave the way for parliamentary action.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker put forward the idea of a formal resolution, noting as the Commons met that the United Nations secretary-general had suggested the world is "slithering into World War Three" and that United States bombing of North Vietnam should stop.

SALTED AWAY

Mr. Pearson salted the issue away temporarily by suggesting that MPs can speak their piece during the current throne speech debate.

However, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) revived it by urging Mr. Pearson to invite Mr. Diefenbaker and leaders of the other parties to a meeting Monday to frame a formal resolution to be placed before Parliament.

Parliament, he said, should be enabled to "speak to the world about the tragic international situation facing us." A formal resolution would be far more effective than any number of speeches by MPs. Thant's statements couldn't be brushed aside or regarded as an academic exercise.

NO RESPONSE

There was no immediate government response. Earlier, Mr. Pearson said he does not think anyone can predict what may happen in Vietnam if the war continues.

As the throne speech debate wound up its third day, a third motion amounting to non-confi-

War Talk Hit

'Thant Using Scare'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Congressman Cornelius Gallagher (D — New Jersey) charged Friday that United Nations Secretary-General Thant was using "scare tactics" in his efforts to end the war in Vietnam.

* * *

Speaking to a Canadian news conference, the outspoken congressman said Thant was "lending credence to the myth" that Washington would halt the bombing without a similar de-escalation by Hanoi.

* * *

Gallagher said Thant "could better serve the ends of peace" by going to North Vietnam and convincing Hanoi "of our hope that we can find a solution to the conflict."

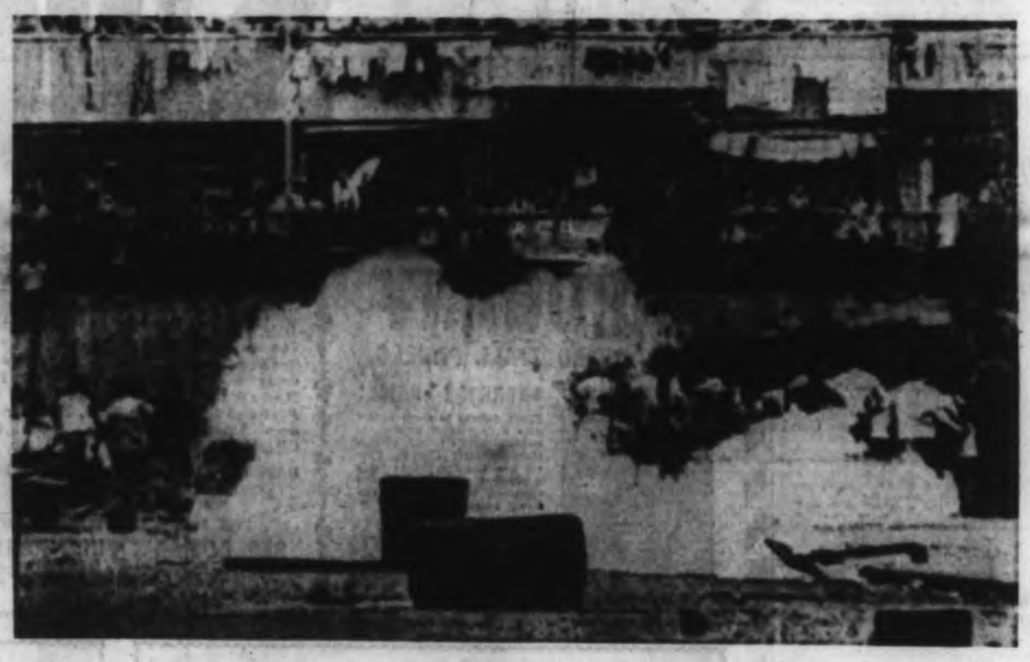

* * *

He added that the United States realized that a continuation of the conflict "takes us down a dangerous path." But he said a permanent stop to the bombing would not lessen this danger.

Riots Go On, Demands Listed

CHINA PRESSES HONG KONG

Police tear gas shell explodes amid crowd in riot-torn Kowloon section of Hong Kong

Police Showered By Rocks, Bottles

HONG KONG (UPI) — Screaming Chinese youths showered police today with stones and bottles in the third straight day of Red Guard-type rioting in Hong Kong. China protested alleged police suppression in the British crown colony and presented a list of demands.

Gangs of youths poured from housing projects in the Kowloon Chinese district and attacked police. They hurled bottles, bricks and other objects from windows and alleys.

First from Peking

The Chinese protest was the first, official and direct involvement of Peking in the Hong Kong turmoil. It was made by officials of Peking's official New China News Agency.

Today's rioting flared when a company of police moved into an area near a plastic flower factory, the scene of leftist-inspired labor agitation and violence. It was at the factory that full-scale rioting erupted Thursday. (See also Page 2)

As youths attacked the police, reinforcements quickly arrived. One company of riot police and three companies of marine police were brought in to help control the rioting. But they could not prevent the youths from setting several fires and attacking buses.

Thousands of leftist Chinese youths, quoting party chairman Mao Tse-Tung's "Thoughts," rioted Friday in Kowloon, hurling Molotov cocktails, looting shops and igniting trucks and cars.

The NCNA is an official agency of the Chinese government in Peking, directly under the control of the state council (cabinet), headed by Premier Chou En-lai. The agency maintains a sizeable bureau in Hong Kong.

In its protest letter to the

1,000,000 Await Pope Paul

FATIMA, Portugal (UPI)— Pope Paul VI left Rome at dawn Saturday and flew to this Portuguese shrine to the Virgin Mary to pray for peace in Vietnam. He was to meet the only survivor of the three children who declared they saw the Virgin Mary in what the Catholic church officially holds to be a miracle.

More than 1,000,000 faithful waited through a cold, rainy night to greet the Pope.

Doctor Gives Her Four Weeks

Fleeing Girl May Die

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. John Price said Friday that missing Miriam Ymilyniemi, 15-year-old Jehovah's Witness, may have only two to four weeks to live without hospital treatment.

Miriam has been missing since Tuesday night when she fled hospital fearing another blood transfusion, which is against her religious credo.

Dr. Price said he based his opinion on medical evidence given at a family court hearing earlier Friday which awarded custody of Miriam to the British Columbia Children's Aid Society.

Judge Earl Vance was ruling on an application by Dorothy Lois Myllyniemi, Miriam's mother, for the custody of her child. Mrs. Myllyniemi, also a Jehovah's Witness, does not want her daughter to receive blood transfusions.

Miriam was taken into the society's custody in January for treatment of a kidney ailment known as uremia, which can be fatal if not treated.

Dr. Price was acknowledged by Judge Vance as the most important witness before the court.

Stanley Pinkerton, Children's Aid executive director, issued a public appeal for assistance in locating Miriam after consulting with her physician, Dr. Thomas Davis.

He said he also contacted Laurier Saumur, supervisor of the B.C. Jehovah movement in Victoria and "I got absolutely no co-operation — the girl and

Coyne Survives Stormy Session

WINNIPEG (CP) — The future of the newly-chartered Bank of Western Canada was left uncertain after a stormy directors' meeting Friday during which majority shareholder Marc Bienvenu sought unsuccessfully to have President James E. Coyne sever all connections with the bank.

His motion lost on a 7 to 7 deadlock, with Mr. Coyne casting a vote in favor of himself. Four directors were absent.

Mr. Bienvenu left the meeting before it ended, telling reporters he was returning to Montreal.

Mr. Coyne told a press conference after the meeting the Montreal financier had given a clear indication at one stage he intended to dissolve the bank, which has yet to open its doors for business.

Mr. Bienvenu, however, would make no commitment to reporters other than that he had told the directors "I am not going to come back here for meetings every week . . . and have clashes all the time."

'Little Monks' Eased Anguish

WASHINGTON (LAT) — There was a warm Tuesday evening last June when President Johnson sat alone in the White House anguished over the possibility that history would record him as the man who started the Third World War.

* * *

Half a world away, under his orders, American airplanes were making their first strike at the oil dumps in the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong. The raid was fraught with great danger.

Suppose, for example, the bomb load from one of those planes went astray and hit a Soviet freighter in the harbor. An error like that, the president felt, could conceivably bring the two great nuclear super-powers to an exchange of blows.

The president's agitation was apparent to his daughter, Luci, when she and her fiance, Patrick Nugent, returned to the White House from a date.

* * *

The soon-to-be-married daughter asked her father what the trouble was. He explained that at that very moment, in the mid-morning hours in Vietnam, the attack planes were in the air.

And then, as the story was disclosed Friday, he said to Luci:

"Your daddy may go down in history as having started World War III."

* * *

Luci suggested to her father that perhaps prayers to God would help. In fact, she made the specific suggestion that they all go immediately to "my little monks," as the president has since related to friends and associates.

Pat placed a call to the priory of St. Dominic's Church, asking that the church be kept open for a visit sometime between 10:30 p.m. and midnight.

One of the Dominican brothers who maintain the buildings opened the church and at 10:30, Mr. Johnson, Lady Bird, Luci and Pat, accompanied by a carload of secret servicemen, came to the church.

* * *

They prayed under a grand sculptured Pieta hanging from the ceiling before the main altar. For half an hour, the four were on their knees praying and then they left.

Back in the White House it was a long night for the president as he awaited the report, but nothing untoward happened.

The president has related to friends, associates and visitors at times during the past year how he told Luci that the raid had been a success, that there had been no mishaps.

* * *

Until a White House reception Thursday night, when the story was again told, it had not been publicly disclosed.

The president was relieved that morning after the night of prayer and he told Luci so.

"You see," she answered, according to one version, "that's what my little monks can do for you."

Hong Kong Feels China's Pressure

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

British colonial authorities insist on official composure while heads are broken and street riots spread in the Crown colony of Hong Kong.

"As far as we are concerned the trouble in the colony is a labor dispute," said a spokesman in London Friday.

With almost hourly reports of spreading violence, demonstrators wearing Mao Tse-tung badges and shouting Maoist slogans, the official attitude has an air of whistling in the dark.

Trouble in Kowloon, where about half of Hong Kong's 4,000,000 Chinese live, sprang from a labor dispute at a plastics factory. But it is the latest in a string of worker protests that have taken on political echoes of the Red Guard revolution in neighboring China. Seamen, taxi-drivers, cement workers and students have been involved.

The protest pattern in Hong Kong is similar to trouble last year in Macao, Portuguese colony a ferry ride away. Macao authorities finally were forced to knuckle under to local Chinese demands—backed by pressure from the Chinese government.

The most alarmist estimates of the Hong Kong situation include predictions by Asian experts that evidence of Red Guard influence signals the beginning of the end of 135 years of British rule.

Official British response maintains that China needs Hong Kong as a trade and diplomatic link with a largely-hostile outside world.

China earns an estimated one-third of its foreign exchange through Hong Kong. Foreign currency thus earned is a continuing necessity as long as China depends on outside commodities, including Canadian wheat.

If China inspires rebellious fervor in Hong Kong, the argument runs, China likewise could call a halt if necessary. The weakness of the argument can be seen with a glance across the border at the troubles Chinese authorities are experiencing in trying to cool off the chaotic ardor of their own Red Guards.

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK — Saturday

FAST RELIEF: A while ago this column was devoted to David Randall's book on the insurance industry. His indictment of car insurance companies is titled Dollars on the Highway.

The book is not only interesting reading; it gets results. Here's how it worked for one reader:

Catherine North, of Port Arthur, writes, "It was because of your article that I decided to phone the insurance company regarding an accident which I had during January — I may add it was not my fault — I had to pay $100 before my car was released after being repaired.

"That was the last I heard so today I took action — I am assured a refund will be given to me."

Author David Randal commented from his Vancouver office, "I have been getting lots of inquiries and a number of adjusters have told me they are getting more claims for general damages. The public is waking up at last."

★ ★ ★

ANOTHER LETTER: Here's a complaint from Mad Citizen, who details how his car was ticketed by city police in the Mayfair Shopping Centre lot.

It seems the car was parked by a yellow-painted curb and Mad Citizen had to pay $2.50.

Mayfair manager A. G. Coning comments, "Though this is a private area police have complete jurisdiction.

"The parking regulations were made to facilitate easy traffic flow and also to maintain as high a safety factor as possible. If people park against a yellow-marked curb downtown they get a ticket and it's the same here."

This might not satisfy Mad Citizen but it makes sense to keep traffic moving as smoothly and as safely as possible.

★ ★ ★

MUG SHOT: In 1960 Barbara Steffler had her picture in Seen In Passing. On Thursday she got a letter from Jasper Fleming in Kingston, Jamaica, asking if she wanted a pen pal.

Mr. Fleming said he had been rummaging through some old newspapers and come across the 1960 Colonist. The letter contained the clipping from the seven-year-old paper.

★ ★ ★

ANNIE HUNGRY?: Cliff Clarke has come up with a new twist to promote his McPherson Theatre Restaurant and his production of Annie Get Your Gun.

On May 24 he will offer a lavish buffet supper on the mezzanine of the Playhouse with the slogan "All you can eat and Annie Get Your Gun for $3.75." Showtime is 8 p.m.

HIPPIES IN REVIEW: The Victoria Youth Council is getting its activities appraised by an outside team of experts from the Company of Young Canadians.

There will be four days of talks to review activities on the local scene.

This afternoon a group of interested adults will meet at the home of Mrs. G. W. Joy, 2252 Tinto, to discuss youth activities.

Mrs. Joy's daughter, Beverley, is a member of the Company of Young Canadians serving in eastern Canada.

The members of the Victoria Youth Council hope to meet Monday with Mayor Hugh Stephen and Police Chief J. F. Gregory.

★ ★ ★

OTHER SIDE: A commissionaire was on meter duty near Centennial Square and passed the Silver Threads where he saw an old car alongside an expired meter.

The man-in-blue sneaked a glance up and down the street, then fished into his pocket for change and fed the meter.

There are a few Good Samaritans left.

Your Good Health

Blue Spots Require Testing

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: I am over 65, and for about two years have had black and blue spots all over my body and arms and legs. I should describe them as broken veins such as might be caused by a severe bruise.

They come and go. Sometimes there is pain but usually not. Several doctors have observed this but made no suggestion as to what might be done, except that my regular physician suggested lemon juice in the morning. Could you discuss this?—MRS. H.P.

This doesn't sound like ordinary bruising — although that is something that rather frequently bothers folks who aren't getting enough calcium or vitamin C in their diet. The lemon juice provides vitamin C. It doesn't sound like a matter of broken veins, which would appear primarily in the legs and be associated with a stinging sensation.

This raises a suspicion (from your description) of some form of purpura, or hemorraging in the skin or other surface tissues. Purpura may result in a decrease in blood platelets, or special cells in the blood which have to do with clotting.

Drugs, certain toxic conditions, or even allergies can be factors in this. So also can a deficiency in Vitamin C.

If your condition is purpura, and if it is bothersome enough to warrant more elaborate investigation, a complete blood study, including a platelet count and prothrombin time test, may provide the necessary clues.

★ ★ ★

Dear Dr. Molner: Since leukemia and leukoplakia are spelled somewhat alike, are these two diseases inter-related?—MRS. H.N.

No. Both words are formed, in part, from the Greek word Leukos, meaning white. Leukemia is a disease involving the white cells of the blood. Leukoplakia (from leukos and plex) means white plates or spots, or a mucous membrane.

★ ★ ★

Note to Mrs. H.J.: I doubt that any more babies have navel hernia now than ever was the case. A great many (unlike hernias in older folks) heal readily. A binder is seldom necessary or helpful. Simple taping of a flat object (like a half dollar) over the navel ordinarily is all that is necessary. Your baby's bronchitis and cough could well have caused strain enough to make it worse.

No Evidence It Was Deliberate—U.S.

Moscow Silent on Destroyer Clash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. State Department reported no evidence Friday that the Kremlin deliberately ordered destroyer collisions to worsen U.S.-Soviet relations or warn against American actions in Vietnam.

With this public assessment the Johnson administration sought to calm international waters troubled by the two naval encounters in the Sea of Japan Wedesday and Thursday.

NO REPLY

Robert McCloskey, state department press officer, said no official reply has come from Moscow yet to the stern U.S. protests over the two brushes between the U.S. destroyer Walker and Soviet destroyers shadowing U.S. naval manoeuvres.

The harrassments and the collisions are serious matters, the state department spokesman said.

But he added:

"We have no evidence that the incidents reflect any deliberate intention to worsen U.S.-Soviet relations or that they are related in any way to the situation in Vietnam . . .

"There were similar incidents in the past although less serious than those of the last two days.

"We hope the Soviets are also concerned at such incidents and that they will pay due heed to our protests.

"We trust that we have seen the last of these incidents."

ONE OBSERVER

The defence department reported that the American anti-submarine exercises continued Friday in the Sea of Japan with at least one Soviet warship observing from a distance but there were no new harassment efforts.

Answering a question, the U.S. Navy disclosed the Thursday collision left a six-inch hole 10 above the waterline.

Formal Kremlin diplomatic response to previous U.S. complaints of dangerously close naval shadowing have arrived anywhere from days to months after the event.

The government-run Moscow radio, meanwhile, has disputed the U.S. charge, contending the American ships were on dangerous manoeuvres which caused the collisions.

Heavy Flak Pierced

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. jet bombers flew through Communist MiG interceptors and heavy anti-aircraft defences Friday to bomb an oil storage area and an army barracks four miles from the centre of Hanoi. In the south Viet Cong guerrillas attacked with mortars for the second time in two days a U.S. air base north of Saigon.

Communist guerrillas fired on navy Seabees working on the big marine base near Chu Lai, about 360 miles northeast of Saigon, injuring eight Seabees and damaging two landing strips. There were no U.S. casualties in the mortar attack at Phuoc Vien airbase, about 15 miles north of the capital.

In the air war, F105 Thunderchiefs flying from Thailand pounded a storage area four miles north of the heart of North Vietnam's capital city, as well as an army barracks four miles southwest of Hanoi.

Pilots reported several clashes with MiGs, but there were no immediate U.S. reports of any aircraft losses on either side.

Vietnam Spy Stories Described as 'Bilge'

OTTAWA (CP) — Freelance reporter Jack MacBeth, who spent four months in Vietnam a year ago, Friday described as "unadulterated bilge" stories by two other reporters that Canadian members of the International Control Commission in Vietnam feed information to U.S. intelligence agencies.

"Things haven't changed since I was there," Mr. MacBeth said in an interview.

Gerald Clark, associate editor of the Montreal Star, and CBC reporter Tim Raife have reported after working in Vietnam that Canadian members of the commission in Hanoi are supplying the Americans with information about conditions in North Vietnam.

Mr. MacBeth said the only intelligence the Canadians could pass on to the U.S. would be descriptions of people and reports on the weather and the price of bananas at the local market.

WORKED FOR LIBERALS

Mr. MacBeth worked for the Liberal party in the 1962 election campaign. In 1963, he was appointed executive assistant to Judy LaMarsh, then health minister.

Charles Lynch, chief of Southam News Services who was last in Vietnam in 1963, said in a column published Friday in the Ottawa Citizen:

"Returning home from that (Vietnam) trip, I undertook a series of speaking engagements in which I stated that our men were acting as spies for the Americans.

"I took the same line in conversations with officials of our external affairs department, and nobody bothered to enter a denial."

Fears

dence in the minority Liberal government was put forward by the Creditistes.

The motion accused the government of failing to foster constitutional development of Canada in a way to ensure the constant economic growth of agriculture.

MILK SUPPORT

Charles - Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval), who introduced the motion, said federal price supports for milk do not meet farmers demands. In areas of Quebec hit by disease last year, the effect of the federal milk quota system had been to halve government payments to farmers.

He said farmers planning to march on the capital May 24 will make this plain to the government, which has been under strong pressure for higher milk subsidies.

RANGED WIDELY

The throne speech debate, traditional vehicle for MPs to raise any issue, ranged widely. Besides suggesting a Monday political summit on Vietnam, Mr. Knowles demanded immediate implementation of the federal medical care insurance plan, scheduled to go into force July 1, 1968.

He said Health Minister MacEachen had originally promised it would be available to any province requesting the federal money but now the government is hiding behind a vague reference to implementation when there is a "consensus" among the provinces.

Folly in Vietnam

IT IS SYMBOLIC of what the U.S. thinks is yet in store in Vietnam that the Pentagon has decided to take a Second World War battleship out of mothballs and get it ready for service in that Southeast Asia conflict.

Post-1945 opinion was that warships of this type were henceforth obsolete, but apparently there is use in Vietnam for its nine 16-inch guns.

It may take from nine to 17 months before the battleship can be readied for action, and cost anything up to $27 million. The cost is picayune to the American economy but the time element suggests there is no end in sight of the Vietnam campaign.

Prime Minister Pearson was patently in a despondent mood when during the Throne speech debate this week he painted a grim picture of the present scale of fighting there. If it continues, he intimated, and few can disagree with him, it cannot fail to expand into even more lethal proportions; enough to mean "the destruction of the Vietnamese people."

If this is so, and both North and South Vietnam must be suffering chaos and human and physical misery in many areas, then there is excuse enough for both sides, or either one of them as far as that goes, to call the war off. Pride of "face" cannot warrant the obliteration of a nation, even one divided by internecine strife.

Mr. Pearson had other forebodings connected with Vietnam. This conflict might reinforce the cold war between East and West just when prospects were favorable for detente. It would put pressure upon Western Europe to make its own arrangements with Eastern Europe, meaning presumably that in such case America would be ignored in any settlement and thus a cleavage created damaging to the unity of the western world.

The prime minister emphasized that the situation in Vietnam is growing more dangerous internationally, and that personally it gives him grave anxiety. He can foresee no possibility of a quick military decision nor in fact of a military solution to the Vietnamese problem.

Mr. Pearson's views on this so grievous a dispute, one which could engulf the world if it keeps on escalating, should serve as a warning to both sides that a continuation of this warfare is a folly that should be brought to an end.

Quebec Pique

PREMIER JOHNSON of Quebec is getting excited again about supposed federal trespasses on the sovereignty of his province. He is up in the air about the signing of a cultural agreement with Belgium in Ottawa, and he claims the right to censor and control the contents of television programs in Quebec on CBC and private stations.

The premier asserts that the content of television is an educational matter and education is totally under provincial jurisdiction; likewise that the five-year agreement with Belgium for artistic, scientific and technological exchanges involves educational affairs, that Quebec was not even consulted and that the signing was thus a blow to the province's prestige.

But in the first instance it is obvious what chaos could reign in Canadian television if each provincial government could censor and control programs according to its own likes and dislikes. Nor does Mr. Johnson appear to take into account that he has no way to stop or alter transmissions from across Quebec's borders.

And in the second, though just possibly he has a reasonable complaint about Ottawa not consulting the provinces, it is not difficult to imagine the effect of each province being entitled to consider itself an autonomous power in foreign relations—and this is the direction in which the Quebec administration is edging.

The main cause of Mr. Johnson's present pique, however, seems to be that the signing of the agreement in Ottawa took the spotlight away even for a moment from Expo 67 and its location. The Quebec premier makes clear that in his opinion this is not Canada's world fair, no matter what the rest of the country may have thought; nor anything to do with the Confederation centenary. The heads of state are coming with Expo as their main reason, he says. And Quebec will not endure their visits being used by Ottawa "to show the world that it's possible to crush the province in a field under its jurisdiction."

We doubt that other countries are interested. Unless, perhaps, they see this divisiveness in the midst of a celebration of unity, this chauvinistic arrogance, this insistence that Quebec is a state within a state, as symbolic of much that is still ailing Man and His World.

'Darn Good Job'

EVERYTHING, they say, comes to him who waits. But it isn't always true. All the more reason for rejoicing that this time it is, and the greater part of the Forbidden Plateau has at last been acquired from the logging subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railway by the province and will become a Class A park where no alienations will be allowed.

The wait has been long. We have been looking at some yellowed clippings on the subject:

June 25, 1954: The recent stand at the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island convention by the Courtenay-Comox chamber to have the Forbidden Plateau included in the boundaries of Strathcona Park has won support of the Ladysmith chamber.

Dec. 10, 1955: A timber cruise of Forbidden Plateau will be made by the B.C. Forest Service shortly to evaluate the area's potential as a provincial park. Negotiations between the provincial government and the CPR have been in progress for the past two months with a view to taking over the area as a park.

Nov. 3, 1955: "I'm delighted" (said Mayor Claude Harrison) "that the government has taken this stand on Forbidden Plateau. There is no place where you can find so much of interest in such a small area. I took a party of mountaineers in there 25 years ago. It is one of the most beautiful things you ever saw. It wants no upkeep—just a road in. There are miles of heather and beautiful flowers. Mr. Bennett is doing a darn good job—building a western empire."

Nearly 12 years of intermittent negotiations later, the acquisition of the plateau will cause many a Vancouver Islander to repeat the compliment.

"All I know is Sarge has been up there ever since Mayor Stephen praised the police force last Sunday."

Britain's Foreign Secretary

George Brown 'Faces the Facts'

By RAY McHUGH from London

GEORGE Brown, one-time high school dropout and union organizer, hardly fits the movie mold for British foregin secretaries.

He slouches in his chair, drums his fingers on the desk, sometimes pounds it for emphasis, always seems to be in motion.

An unruly shock of greying hair, a short muscular body that seems more comfortable in rough tweeds than the correct black of Whitehall and heavy horn-rimmed glasses add to the impression that Brown is miscast as a diplomat.

But at this juncture in British history, he may be just the man for the job. He considers himself an economist and Britain's foreign problems revolve around one central issue — the country can no longer afford the role of world leader.

Perhaps it takes a realist like Brown to face the situation.

"Nobody likes it," he says, "but we've got to face facts. We need the Common Market if our industries are to compete in Europe.

"We haven't got the funds to maintain a military establishment all over the world, and our people are a bit tired of shouldering all these responsibilities.

"The world has changed and we have to change with it or go under."

* * *

Brown's position in the Labour government is somewhat unique. Despite the trade unions' disgruntlement over the year-long wage-price freeze, the foreign secretary remains popular with British workers. Most of their anger is directed at Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

Brown, they remember, almost quit the cabinet in protest to what Britons call "the squeeze," although he now defends the policy.

Brown's major battlefront is the bid for entry into the European Common Market, a bid supported by Conservatives and opposed by many Labourites.

Once an outspoken foe of alignment with the Western European bloc, the foreign secretary now insists that it is the only road open to British industry and labor. He has just completed a "spadework" tour of the capitals of the "market" countries and he has hosted a meeting of the looser-knit European Free Trade Association (EFTA). If Britain joins the EEC, other EFTA countries can be expected to follow suit.

"There is the prospect of a European market of 300 million people," he says. "The combined markets of the EEC and EFTA would indeed be a strong basis from which the unity of Europe could grow further."

As Brown sees it now, Britain needs membership in the Common Market if it is to find an outlet that will justify expanding its industrial and technological base.

He clearly does not expect another veto from French President Charles de Gaulle, although some leading British financial experts believe de Gaulle prefers the present EEC arrangements in which France has the dominant political voice.

"De Gaulle has used those sections of the Treaty of Rome that suit French needs," said one London banker. "He has ignored or blocked consideration of the treaty's sections that deal with eventual political co-operation.

"If Britain joins, we will begin probing sections of the treaty that de Gaulle would leave alone."

Brown, however, has told Labourites that he does not believe de Gaulle is powerful enough to veto a new British application since French financial interests and French public opinion favor entry.

"The secretary insists that it will be possible to protect the special trading privileges for such Commonwealth nations as New Zealand, but he does not minimize the fact that Britain's cost of living will jump and certain sections of her agriculture will suffer from tariff-free European competition.

Trade circles warn that the price of butter could double in London shops if Britain joins the EEC and housewives were told to expect sharp increases in meat prices. The automobile industry predicted a loss of $40 million in sales during the first year of membership. Sharp reductions in sales to Commonwealth countries and EFTA members were predicted by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders.

* * *

"It won't be easy," Brown admits.

The Labour Party, he acknowledges, could suffer some losses, although he insists these would be short-term. The party has already been jolted by recent council election setbacks that saw the Tories score major victories but it does not have to face a national election until 1970. Recent losses have been blamed on Labour's wage-price freeze that sliced the balance of payments deficit almost in half in 1966 — from $974 million to $529 million.

But the belt-tightening also reduced Britain's growth rate to 1.5 per cent and saw unemployment increase at a rate of 29,000 a month.

Brown, known for his candid, sometimes incautious, remarks in Commons, prefers to talk of Britain's foreign policy issues in broad generalities. He restates London's support for American objectives in Vietnam, but refuses to indorse the current escalation of the air war against Communist North Vietnam.

"As a co-chairman (with Russia) of the 1954 Geneva conference, Britain has a particular responsibility in all this," Brown says. "The problem is not just to stop the war, but to stop it urgently."

* * *

British Labourites are almost unanimous in this disapproval of American air attacks on North Vietnam. The majority of British newspaper opinion and the editorial overtones of BBC broadcasts reflect this disapproval.

But just when American tempers begin to fray over the Labour government's Vietnam position, Brown manages to calm things.

When Hanoi reported that U.S. planes strafed a British ship in Haiphong, the left-wing Labourites rose to demand "the strongest representations in Washington against this latest outrage."

Brown promised an inquiry but then added caustically:

"Only a week or so (ago) a British ship was mined, holed and almost sunk in Saigon harbor by a mine placed there by North Vietnamese. I am interested that no one in the House asked me questions about that."

The withdrawal from the strategic riot-torn base at Aden on the tip of the Arabian peninsula will continue on schedule, Brown says. The British garrison is committed to pull out next February, turning control over to the South Arabian republic.

The secretary sidesteps any discussion of Aden's future, but British military and business circles are convinced that President Gamel Abdel Nasser of Egypt will grab effective control over the territory as soon as the last English soldier leaves.

* * *

Despite the conditions of near anarchy and terrorism in the area, Brown is apparently determined to extricate the troops.

The Wilson government also intends a further withdrawal of forces from Singapore, thus sharply reducing British power "east of Suez."

The move will place even greater burdens on American naval and air power in the Far East.

The answer to almost every reporter's question in the British Foreign Office is the same: "We haven't got the money."

There is no doubt that Britain does face an uncertain economic future. Some claim the Labour government cannot survive once the full impact of Common Market competition hits this island, particularly its trade unionists.

Conservatives complain that Wilson and Brown have failed to display leadership. They complain that the two men simply move from crisis to crisis, intent only on mending domestic political fences that will keep them in power.

"George Brown is no statesman," barked one Conservative. "He is a clever, articulate debater whose style and ethics have developed over the years in a hundred union halls. His horizon is the lines of the Labour Party's districts. How can he deal with the problems of the world?"

At the Foreign Office, a reporter wonders if Britain really is dealing with the problems of the world or trying to avoid them. Perhaps George Brown is the foreign secretary for this moment — the time when Britain quietly submerges herself into what she hopes will be a peaceful partnership with Western Europe.

Urgent Problems

The Growing Cities

By CAROL GAYNOR from Washington

BY 2000 A.D. — less than 35 years away — the average American conurbation will have a population of the present size of Greater New York — nearly 14 million. Every year there is an increase of five million in the American urban population. These and other equally chilling statistics were scattered almost casually throughout a recent two-day symposium on "Science, Engineering and the City", held by the National Academy of Sciences in Washington.

* * *

American and British urban planners, engineers, sociologists, scientists and technologists at the meeting were agreed on the Leviathan nature of the problem. But there was a rift between those favoring long-term solutions and those who feel that urgent short-term action "to sort out the present horrible situation in the central cities" is essential.

Advocates of long-term planning like Britton Harris, professor of city planning at the University of Pennsylvania, feel that the problems are so immense and many-sided that "the application of known and foreseeable technologies is no longer the most useful starting point for solution." Piecemeal solutions should be done away with; planning should "extend into areas such as industrial organization, education, and medical care."

Other experts feel that the problems are too urgent to wait for the planners to perfect their plans. Professor Jerold Zacharias of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, speaking on planning for education, said he had been tempted to separate short-term from long-term recommendations for educational reforms.

"But then people would say, if it's long-term it doesn't have to be started yet. We are not ready. All that does is to put it off."

* * *

A year's delay, said Professor Zacharias, in starting the breaking of the old school patterns at present hobbling the inner cities "represents exactly one year's worth of children," and consequently a dangerous delay in reshaping the white middle class mould of American education which is the greatest factor impeding the successful integration of Negroes into American society.

Urban transport experts at the meeting also understandably inclined to practical short-term solutions.

"Some day, perhaps, automated capsules will handle the function of buses," said Sumner Myers of the Institute of Public Administration in Washington, "but for at least the next decade, public transportation users will be riding some kind of multi-passenger vehicle." Mr. Myers was, therefore, in favor of making the best of what was available: cleaning up the subways, speeding up the trains, and since 75 per cent of all public transport is by bus, radically improving the design and efficiency of the bus service. Bus technology he said is surprisingly backward: they are a bad shape, hard to get into, slow, smelly, noisy, cramped and otherwise uncomfortable.

Since buses carry such a high percentage of passengers, Mr. Myers suggested they should be given priority over other vehicles on the road by an electronically operated signal device which would be "people-oriented, not vehicle-oriented." The limitations of planning were depressingly apparent when Mr. Myers was asked how a "people-oriented" traffic device taught to distinguish buses by their size would cope with trucks. "We hadn't thought about trucks," he replied.

Advocates of both long and short-term planning, however, agreed that far greater use should be made of existing cities as live laboratories for research and experiment in fields such as space requirements, lighting needs, the life-span of buildings, noise and air pollution. The New York public transport strike of 1966, for example, provided invaluable evidence of what happens when a great city grinds to a halt. "We wanted to know just how many cars the bridges could take in a day," said Mr. Carroll of the New York Transport Commission. "We found out. But it cost a lot."

Lord Llewellyn Davies of University College, London, summed up the situation. "The armored columns of science are being turned round to attack the problems of the growing and changing city. But we could have a Stalingrad. . . ."

Washington Calling

Encouraging to the Hawks

By MARQUIS CHILDS

IT is the kind of coincidence that the Johnson administration will interpret as meaning solid backing for the escalation of the war in Vietnam. The president's standing in the Gallup poll has gone up following the air attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong while a leading Senate dove is threatened with political annihilation.

Hardening conservatism, fostered by an "education campaign" of the John Birch Society, has encouraged the extreme right in Idaho to believe they can knock out Sen. Frank Church with a recall election. In normally Republican Idaho, Church is the first Democrat ever to be elected to a second Senate term.

He has been a consistent critic of the enlarging war, although his criticism has been less sharp in recent months than that of some of his fellow Democratic doves. For the right wing determined to purge the senator shades of difference are unimportant. Sample recall petitions now being printed up charge:

"Sen. Church has consistently opposed military measures which would help win the war in Vietnam and save the lives of hundreds of Americans dying in Vietnam each week the war continues."

The record shows that the senator from Idaho has voted for every military appropriation bill providing funds for the war. A second count levelled at Church in the petition is that "at a time when Americans are being killed in Vietnam by Russian bullets fired from Russian guns" he supported the consular treaty with the Soviet Union "thereby giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

Under Idaho's constitution 10 per cent of those voting in the election for governor last year can demand a recall. Forces behind the campaign believe they will have little difficulty in getting 10 per cent of the 252,591 voters to sign recall petitions. This will require Idaho's secretary of state to call an election in which the sole question will be the recall of the senator. If the recall should carry, he would face a contest prior to his campaign for re-election in 1968.

In his montly bulletin issued after last November's election Robert Welch, head of the John Birch Society, took a generous share of the credit both for electing Ronald Reagan as governor of California and for what happened in Idaho. There a moderate Republican, Robert E. Smylie, running in the primary for a fourth term as governor, was defeated by an ultraconservative, Don Samuelson, the present governor. Smylie, lukewarm toward Goldwater in '64, had done much to try to give his party a new look with his leadership in the Republican Governors Association. A conservative Republican, George V. Hansen, defeated former Rep. Ralph Harding, a liberal Democrat, by more than two to one.

* * *

"A real test for the society," Welch wrote in his bulletin, "was Idaho, for there we were fairly strong. Our members had been actively carrying on an educational campaign for several years. The questions as to both issues and personalities were clearly drawn."

On the other side encouraging the doves is the amazing response that Sen. George McGovern (D—S.D.) has had from his forthright speech two weeks ago calling the Vietnam war a disaster. A careful tabulation of 600 telegrams and 5,000 letters shows well over 90 per cent favoring his call for a halt in the bombing, confining military action to holding operations and negotiating directly with the Viet Cong.

Some of the writers said that while they did not agree with his position on Vietnam they admired him for standing up to "that man in the White House." South Dakota, with a population also about 700,000, is another of the states on which the right wing means to concentrate with large infusions of money and talent from the outside.

Senators who rose on the floor to support McGovern, among them Robert F. Kennedy of New York, also report a favorable response. An analysis of the returns from McGovern's bold speech encourages the minority critical of escalation to believe there is far more support than the polls show for independence and for outspoken criticism.

Reduction Anticipated

Trip-Wire Role for NATO

By PHILIP DEANE

NATO is obviously of less importance than it was; otherwise the Americans would not be reducing their troops in Europe to save dollars, nor would the British; and the Germans would be digging up the necessary money to keep those troops. But few politicians believe any more than they need a military force to block a Communist advance westward to the Atlantic. Field Marshal Montgomery has just said that a token Western garrison along the Iron Curtain would be ample and he also urged Britain to cut its military establishment from 450,000 to 150,000.

Other military men will disagree with Monty. The American chiefs of staff, for instance, have disagreed publicly with Defence Secretary McNamara's decision to reduce U.S. troops and aircraft in Europe. There are military experts in Canada who want to keep NATO troops, ships and planes as numerous as they ever were; they will claim, these experts, that if there is safety in Europe it is because of NATO and that the weakening of NATO simply means less safety.

It seems unlikely that politicians will listen to those military men who share the views of the U.S. chiefs of staff. No important politician holding power in Western Europe believes the Communist bloc is interested in a westward push any more; indeed, historians are casting serious doubts now on the proposition that Russia ever had such designs on Western Europe. Furthermore, both NATO and the Warsaw act are clearly committed to the use of tactical nuclear weapons in case the two alliances clash, an absurd clash because these supposedly small weapons are destructive enough to wipe out Europe.

Thus we are likely to see NATO forces reduced to a symbolic "trip-wire"; they will no longer be thought of as a shield. Contingency planning will be for nuclear war, expected to last no more than a week. There will, therefore, be no plans for convoys to feed large armies for years, nor huge depots and reserves.

All this has long been recommended by strategic experts, such as Air Chief Marshal Sir John Slessor who wrote about disengagement more than 12 years ago; not only did he urge it, but he said it would inevitably come, by the very logic of nuclear strategy: first a thinning out of troops, then Russo-American agreement to inspect one another's satellites—which is what the non-proliferation treaty proposes, in effect.

Some military experts protest that it is wrong to reduce troops unilaterally, that reductions should come only by formal agreement with the Russians and in exchange for Russian reductions. The fact is that the Russians have been reducing unilaterally on their side, too; the problem of "trust" has proved to be soluble, perhaps even irrelevant. Fear has been as good a basis as trust could ever be for agreement between the two superpowers.

Familiar Topics

By HENRY BEALD

DO these headlines sound familiar? "Canada Needs New Flag." "Reorganization of Armed Forces." "Confederation Train."

No, they were not selected from a recent sampling of Canadian newspapers. They are from the newspapers our ancestors were reading as the British North American colonies planned to take on nationhood in 1867.

Take this item from the Brantford Courier of June, 1867:

"Some of our contemporaries are continually advocating the necessity of a very early formation of a new flag by which to designate our dominion. There can be no doubt that our government will attend to this matter soon after the assembling of Parliament."

On June 28, 1867, the Quebec Morning Chronicle pondered the role of the military in the new dominion:

"The reorganization of our defensive force and its establishment upon a basis commensurate with its importance and the requirements of the country will be among the first of several important subjects to claim attention at the hands of our new government."

The anti-American feeling that often enters into political discussion today has its roots back well before Confederation.

Joseph Howe, who led a strenuous campaign to keep Nova Scotia out of Confederation, was accused of siding with Washington.

The Barrie Northern Advance felt so strongly about the system of government to the south that on April 4, 1867, it wrote:

"American legislatures are filled with demagogues, prize-fighters and other specimens of the genus vagabond who can handle a bowie knife much better than a pen."

The Confederation train of 1867 was similar to its 1967 counterpart in name only. It was an excursion laid on for the celebration of Confederation and it took vacationers from Montreal to Portland, Me., and then by steamer to Halifax or Saint John, N.B.

Cost of the round trip, according to Le Pays of Quebec, was $16.

By GORDIE HUNTER

The bow tie is his trademark, he's recognized as a true authority on fine bone china and he once bought two genuine Egyptian mummies for advertising purposes.

This is John Courtney Haddock, a vice-president of Woodwards, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, president of the Royal Jubilee Hospital board (for the second time) chairman of the advisory board of the Salvation Army, and chairman of the Heart Fund for Vancouver Island.

He's also one of the most entertaining story-tellers you'll meet in a day's walk and many of the most delightful yarns are at his own expense.

The bow tie bit came about quite accidentally 17 years ago when Mr. Haddock was on a buying trip in Europe. It was Easter time, he was in Paris and trying to make up his mind whether to move south to Italy or north to Sweden. He finally settled on Sweden, reasoning business would be slow in Rome during the Easter celebration.

* * *

"It was the worst mistake I made," he recalls. "It seemed I arrived in Sweden while everyone there was leaving. There was no business so I went on a shopping expedition, found a bow tie I liked, learned to tie it and have been wearing them ever since."

The Haddock wardrobe, incidentally, contains more than 50 such cravats of varied hues and designs.

* * *

Courtney Haddock (and there have been five generations of Courtney Haddocks) was born in Winnipeg and received his high school education there. I asked him where he received his university education.

"I'm not a university man. My university is right here in Woodwards and I've been at it for 44 years."

After the Haddock family moved to Vancouver, young Courtney became a door-to-door vacuum cleaner salesman and from that to a clerk at Woodwards. He worked nights as a janitor at a business school in return for his tuition at the school.

Eventually Woodwards promoted him to the post of china buyer in 1929 and at that time the famed English potteries that produced Spode, Minton and Wedgewood, wouldn't sell to his store. They were tied up in exclusive deals with other stores.

* * *

"So we built up the Royal Worcester line instead and today we have one of the biggest china businesses in Western Canada."

From somewhere in the past I recalled that buyers were supposed to be the cat-on-a-hot-tin-roof executives of the department store business — the men who couldn't afford a single buying mistake. One mistake —, poof!

"No, that's not true," Haddock corrects the supposition. "A buyer who doesn't make any mistakes is too timid to suit me."

To prove his point, he recalls a coup of long ago. He bought up the entire production of a cup-and-saucer set commemorating the coronation of Edward VIII. But it's his story. I'll let him tell it.

* * *

"I ordered 1,000 dozen cup-and-saucer sets and 500 dozen mugs. Mr. W. A. Woodward said I was crazy, but I said we could sell the lot. Then, of course, Edward abdicated before the coronation.

"Well, I had a newspaperwoman friend on one of the Vancouver papers. I showed her one of the cups and the printing where it said, 'crowned.' She agreed it could become a collector's item and ran a small story about it. We didn't even have to advertise and we sold the whole works. Then we sold 10,000 dozen sets of the George VI coronation set.

"I never got one of the Edward sets and just four years ago I had to pay five dollars for one. It sold originally for 98 cents."

* * *

I suggested that in today's fiercely competitive retail business, a successful operator must be part huckster and this merely brightened the ever-present twinkle in the Haddock hazel eyes.

"No, I wouldn't say that. What we have to do is make people realize the value of fine things. The old story about a thing of beauty being a joy forever holds good more than ever today."

The cost of goods has gone up at a fantastic rate in recent years and while increased labor costs have done their share in this regard, I asked if the tremendous amount of money spent on advertising wasn't as big a culprit.

* * *

"Yes, in some instances this is the case. I believe there comes a point where you don't get another dollar's worth of sales no matter how much advertising is done. I feel if you have a good article at a fair price, you don't have to spend a lot of money telling people what you are doing."

In his job as president of the Chamber of Commerce, Haddock feels more business enterprises must join in order that business as a whole can derive greater benefits.

* * *

"We must get better organized. We must get more active business people using the chamber and working together. I think we've made great strides in the last year or so, but we do need a bigger budget to do the job properly."

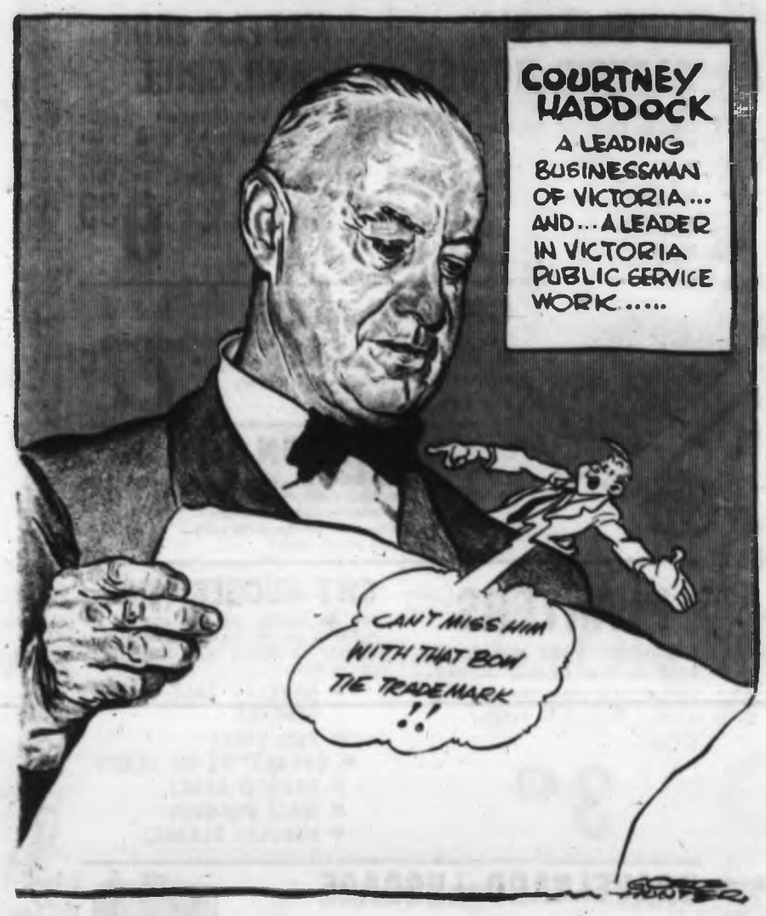

The proposed $6,000,000 Simpson Sears shopping centre gets nothing but praise from Mr. Haddock.

"I'm delighted about it because it will mean a great boost to our economy. It shows we are becoming a metropolitan city and still able to retain the charm of Victoria."

The fact the new store will be in direct competition with his own company doesn't bother him a bit. But then, this shouldn't be too surprising to those who know John Courtney Haddock.

The rough-and-tumble jumble of the business world is bread, water and wine to him, and after 44 years of it, he knows most of the holds by now.

China Will Crush 'Sellout Peace'

fne visits by travelling journalists since the start of the "cultural revolution."

As I crossed Africa, the Middle East and Asia on a world reporting tour, all my inquiries to the Chinese consulates brought no further word, until I reached Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

There, I was granted a five-day transit visa (later extended) and the same day I flew to Canton on a Royal Air Cambodge regular flight—the only non-Chinese on the DC-6. Thence on to Shanghai and Peking, where I arrived in late March.

In Peking, I checked in at the Hsin Chiao Hotel and telephoned some foreign ministry officials I had met in Africa. They invited me to the ministry and I submitted a list of the Chinese leaders I hoped to meet.

* * *

A few days later, the phone rang in my room at 7:45 a.m. I was told that a car would call for me in 10 minutes to take me to Prime Minister Chou En-lai.

Chou's car was a black, 1965 Mercedes Benz, manufactured in West Germany. The morning was clear, but chilly. I rode through streets jammed with thousands of men and women riding their bicycles to work. Other thousands of young Red Guard students already were parading, waving red banners, and beating drums.

A few minutes later, the car reached the People's Palace. A quick check by the guards, and we passed into the old walled palace, a relic of the Forbidden City's dynastic past.

Chou En-lai, himself, was waiting at the door. This is a custom frequently encountered in Asian capitals. The host greets you personally at the door, even though he may be a prime minister or head of state.

Chou stretched out his hand and with a slight smile said in French: "Vous etes le bienvenu Chine . . ." Welcome to China. He recalled, somewhat to my surprise, that he had seen me before in Algiers three years ago. The then-President Ahmed Ben Bella had introduced us, he remembered.

We chatted in French about that visit as we walked through the corridors to a large, sunny reception room, unpretentious but comfortably furnished with traditional Chinese sofas.

When we were seated, I immediately asked about China's intentions in Vietnam. I spoke in French, which he understood easily, but as the interview started he replied in Chinese, which was translated for me by an interpreter.

* * *

"We are ready—tomorrow if need be—to answer any call for volunteers which the Vietnamese may address to us," the interpreter relayed from Chou. "We have made this clear to all, and we know the American government has no doubts about our determination."

The prime minister then elaborated on his statement, forecasting that the Americans would continue to escalate the war leading eventually to landing of U.S. troops in North Vietnam.

This would be still another contingency that would bring Chinese forces into the war, he declared.

"It is evident," Chou said, "that Washington's real objective is to crush the socialist regime in Hanoi. Their denials are a smoke screen spread by American imperialists and Soviet revisionists."

* * *

The prime minister used the Marxist-Leninist phraseology which is familiar to all who follow the news coming out of China. His words carried special weight as the first direct statement by a top Chinese leader to a foreign newspaperman in two years.

Their real meaning must be analyzed and distilled from the familiar phrases, as is always the case in reporting the statements of world leaders.

Warming to his subject, Chou continued: "We are determined the Americans will not succeed. No revolutionary country or people ever will allow them to set foot on the territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

Chou then began to stress each word: "Should this happen, China will have to reconsider its present policy. Americans won't be allowed to approach our borders. Our security would be at stake."

The prime minister, despite his 71 years, looked fit and healthy and as he spoke an almost youthful vigor took hold of him. The most expressive features of his otherwise impassive face is his eyes, which are deep and dark.

An aide quietly appeared with lemon drink and Chinese green tea and the prime minister paused for the amenities this required. When he resumed, his target was the Soviet Union, as well as the United States.

Scornfully, Chou En-lai lumped the Russians with the Americans as China's enemies. Both, he said, are working for a "sellout" of Vietnam.

"Ask any leader of the NLF," he said, using the initials of Viet Cong National Liberation Front. "They will tell you that Khrushchev warned them not to launch their war of national liberation, but to rely on Soviet diplomatic efforts with John Kennedy.

"When the NLF did take up arms, the Russians refused to give them assistance," he continued. "It was not until 1964—and only because they feared the NLF would unmask them before the world—that the Soviet leaders agreed to send any kind of aid."

* * *

Chou said, that despite Soviet aid to Vietnam, the strategy of the Soviets remains the same today as it was under Khrushchev. He said the U.S.S.R. believes it is to its own interest to conclude the Vietnam "war of national liberation" through a compromise that would be "tantmount to defeat."

The subject of our interview veered from Vietnam at that point, but it was brought up again in subsequent interviews I had with other leaders. Yang Chen-wu, the blunt-speaking, non-smiling army chief of staff, said:

"What we taught the American aggressors in Korea has been forgotten. But we will refresh their memory, if they approach our borders.

"As Korea was the graveyard of hundreds of thousands of American soldiers (Washington's figures for the U.S. dead in Korea is 33,629), so will be Vietnam," Yang said.

(Foreign Minister Chen Yi elaborated on the theme of alleged U.S. escalation plans and Peking's contingency plans.

("If and when—as we expect—American land forces cross the frontiers of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, all the revolutionary forces of the world will join to crush them.

("You can rest assured," Chen Yi continued, "that our people will not sit idly by while U.S. aggressors march into North Vietnam. Millions of Chinese volunteers are prepared to go to Vietnam to fight side by side with the Vietnamese people. They are only waiting for the signal.")

* * *

Before turning to the other subjects Chou En-lai and I discussed, perhaps it would be well to summarize my conclusions from his remarks about Vietnam and those of Yang and the others I was to see:

China says it will send troops to Vietnam in any of these contingencies:

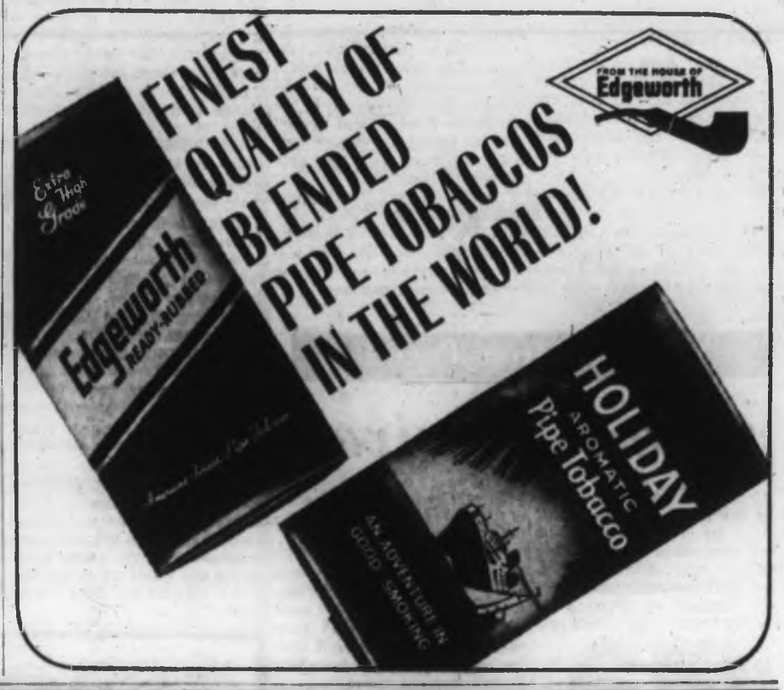

- If Hanoi requests help.
- If American escalation, particularly a landing in North Vietnam is seen by Peking as directly menacing Chinese security.
- If the Russians and Americans are about to arrange a settlement Peking regards as betraying the Vietnamese.

The last contingency was discussed more fully by Chen Po-ta, the top adviser to Communist Party Chief Mao and the chairman of the "cultural revolution." But I will tell you about Chen at a later time.

* * *

Next: Chou En-lai tells why China opposed the Hanoi peace bid, and how he thinks the Vietnam war will end.

governor, NCNA said one of its newsmen "was unreasonably beaten up by the Hong Kong British police Thursday while covering a demonstration at a plastic flower factory in Kowloon.

LABOR DISPUTE

The two days of serious rioting that led to 249 arrests and scores of injuries grew out of a labor dispute at the factory in the San Po Long district, one of the most densely populated areas in Asia.

The protest-letter charged the alleged police action "not only seriously impairs the freedom of the press in covering news but also is an act of bloody oppression and suppression of Hong Kong Chinese residents."

It demanded that the "assailants be severely punished, that apologies be then made to NCNA correspondents and that newsmen receive guarantees of freedom in covering news."

In another development, the main leftist labor unions held a joint meeting Friday to denounce the British and the chairman of the session warned that the British authorities were deliberately planning an anti-Chinese incident.

"Should the Hong Kong British authorities wish to play with fire, then just let them do it," he said. "One day they will find themselves drowned in the ocean of peoples' warfare."

Coyne Survives

Mr. Coyne told reporters he was uncertain about the bank's future. He presumed Mr. Bienvenu now would consider what action to take—whether to proceed with the bank "as it was first intended" or "pick up his marbles and bring about the termination of the bank."

GENERAL MEETING

The Montreal financier, Mr. Coyne said, had several alternatives open. Among them was the possibility of calling a general shareholders' meeting to change representation on the board.

Mr. Bienvenu controls 50.2 per cent of the bank's approximately $15,000,000 capitalization through his recently-purchased control of British International Finance (Canada) Ltd., formerly handled by Sinclair Stevens of Toronto.

Mr. Stevens and Mr. Coyne have been at loggerheads since February when Mr. Coyne stated publicly he had no confidence in BIF and said the corporation's image was doing a disservice to the bank.

The clash led to a hearing before Parliament's banking committee, which told the disputants in effect their squabble was an internal one and should be settled in the board room.

Mr. Stevens subsequently resigned as chairman of the bank but remained as a director.

In making his motion Friday to oust Mr. Coyne, Mr. Bienvenu said he had the agreement of Mr. Stevens to resign if the motion passed.

He told reporters: "The two people who had been carrying on the controversy thus would have been eliminated and it would have been possible to go ahead with the bank on the lines for which it was created to operate—in and for Western Canada."

MESSIAH ROLE

Mr. Stevens told reporters:

There will be a Bank of Western Canada if Mr. Coyne drops his messiah role."

He hoped the bank would survive and "I still think it can." He planned to remain on the board "for the foreseeable future."

Mr. Coyne told the press conference the vote to oust him was one of three motions put forward by Mr. Bienvenu and his supporters.

VOTE TIED

The first, that Mr. Bienvenu be elected to the vacant chairman's post, lost on a 7 to 7 tie.

The second, that John L. Bodie of Edmonton be named chairman, was opposed by Mr. Bodie himself and lost 8 to 5.

At this point, Mr. Coyne said, Mr. Bienvenu stated the only alternative was to wind up the bank and left the meeting room.

He returned with the motion to get rid of Mr. Coyne. It was questioned whether it was permissible for the president to vote on a motion involving his own tenure, but the bank's solicitor was consulted by telephone and gave the opinion it was in order.

Mr. Bodie voted with the Bienvenu supporters on this motion.

The only other concrete item of business, Mr. Coyne said, was discussion of plans for renovating a building at Portage Avenue and Smith Street in downtown Winnipeg — "which may never come to anything"—as the intended head office.

GRAVELY CONCERNED

"The medical attention this girl has been receiving the past four months should be continued if serious physical damage is not to occur," he said in a statement. "We are gravely concerned about the girl . . ."

In his 50-page decision, Judge Vance said consideration was being given by doctors for a kidney transplant for Miriam, which would involve removal of the defective organ and several more blood transfusions.

Miriam said earlier she would rather die than submit to further transfusions because they would jeopardize her life in the Kingdom of God.

A lawyer for the Children's Aid Society said the society would not grant permission for such an operation without referring the matter back to the courts.

Judge Vance quoted statements made by Mrs. Myllyniemi that she would refuse to allow transfusions because she considered them the "same as rape and a she would continue to prevent blood tranfusions in the same manner as she would try to prevent her daughter from being rafied."

"I do not think," the judge said "a child of 15 years of age, particularly one who has been in poor health since birth and has been closely attached to her mother because of this illness, and who has not had the opportunity of enjoying life as the average child does, is in a position to appreciate whether or not she wishes to live or die."

Detective Bill Hendy of the Vancouver Police Missing Persons Bureau said RCMP across Canada have been alerted to mother.

Rifle-Toter Pleads Guilty

Saanich police officers, supported by officers from the city and Oak Bay, surrounded a house Thursday night and threatened to use tear gas unless a 21-year-old rifle-toting man surrendered.

The story of the threat came out in central magistrate's court Friday when Garth Watson Wood, 2931 Dean, pleaded guilty to possession of a rifle with a barrel less than 20 inches long.

He was remanded a week by Magistrate William Ostler for pre-sentence and psychiatric reports.

WORKING OVERTIME

Sgt. John Post said Wood became upset Thursday night when he learned his wife would be working overtime at her job.

He fired one shot from a .22 calibre short-barreled rifle at a kitchen cupboard. His mother was in the kitchen but Wood did not fire at her, Sgt. Post said.

An argument ensued when his wife arrived home and Wood fired one shot from the rifle in the living room and another in a bedroom.

LOCKED IN

"At 7:45 p.m. he allowed his wife and mother to leave and locked himself in (the house)," Sgt. Post said.

Saanich police were called at about 9 p.m. and were unable to get into the house, court was told.

Sgt. Post said Wood was telephoned at about 11 p.m. and told to come out with his hands up or tear gas would be fired into the house. Wood surrendered shortly afterwards.

Prosecutor John Macintyre suggested the psychiatric re- evidence of menm m mdmmmt port, saying there was some evidence of mental instability.

A 54-year-old man who asked for money Thursday morning because he was "starving to death" pleaded guilty to committing vagrancy by begging.

Soren Fevang, no fixed address, was remanded to May 19 for a pre-sentence report. Constable Lorne Shandley said Fevang asked a householder on Superior for the money.

Shipbuilder Belittles 'New' Ferry

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)—J. W. Hudson, executive vice-president of Burrard Dry Dock, one of British Columbia's largest shipbuilders, said Thursday Bennett didn't get much of a bargain on the $1,600,000 ferry he bought in eastern Canada.

Mr. Hudson said the 15-year-old vessel has only half its useful life left. "It's not as much of a bargain as it appears," he said.

He also pointed out the cost of maintenance would be higher on the Pere Nouvel than on B.C.-built ferries because all the other ferries have interchangeable parts.

Taken with telescopic lens, rare picture shows unusual sight of flock of wild flamingos in flight over Great Salt Lake in almost inaccessible interior of Inagua Island. At left, are some of strange nests built by flamingos by scooping up mud from salt marshes and patting it into mounds as high as 22 inches and as much as 30 inches in diameter. Nests are built in spring for winter nesting season. Eggs are hatched by hot summer sun.

* * *

Flamingos Wing Home To Rain-Shattered Nests

NASSAU, Bahamas (Special) — Each winter, the remote Out Island of Inagua welcomes back many thousands of its most gaudy, piercing-voiced visitors — the West Indian flamingos.

From far-flung nesting points in the sprawling Bahamas archipelago, they fly to the seclusion of Inagua, a largely uncharted island which, as one of the last flamingo refuges on earth, possesses the world's largest resident population of them — more than 25,000.

But this year their blazing flash of wings has marked a less triumphant return to their old haunts. Figuratively speaking, they have come back empty-handed.

* * *

Abnormally torrential summer rain last year wiped out all their high nest mounds, which were built during the spring in the otherwise safe, lonely beach marshes. But the giant, scarlet-feathered birds have always faced a struggle for survival.

It is due to the vigilance of the Bahamas National Trust that the colony possesses the largest and most vividly colored population of flamingos in the world. And, due to the Trust's protected refuge at Inagua, their numbers are increasing annually by the hundreds after years of decline to near-extinction.

* * *

Achievement of this has largely been due to such ardent conservationists as Col. Ilia Tolstoy, grandson of the famous Russian novelist and Arthur Vernay, who formed a society for the protection of the Bahamas flamingos.

Few other places in the world — perhaps only in the south of France where the government has a protection program — can still enjoy the spectacle of such vast flying formations of the brilliant-hued, stork-legged flamingos who are the national birds of the Bahamas.

* * *

The Bahamas flamingo gets its particularly gorgeous, pink-to-scarlet coloring from feeding on the small crustaceans which inhabit a sprawling, desolate, salt lake over which strong trade winds blow.

Tips You Off

COPENHAGEN — Fresh report from a daughter traveling solo in Europe: "I'm meeting lots and lots of kids who go around Europe on very little money. Not so many North Americans. But many Australians. Also British and South Africans.

"They get around all kinds of ways: hitchhiking, trains, co-op rented cars. They stop in towns and get sandwich things for the road. Some hostels include breakfast. Youth hostels are $1, student hostels $2.

"I met two Australian boys travelling together except one likes to hitchhike and the other thinks trains are best. So each goes his own way and they meet at night in the next town.

"You always meet someone in a hostel who will give you a ride somewhere."

(I got some good material from several boys who hitchhiked and got by on incredibly little money. I pay them for this. So if you want a copy, send me a dollar. A copy of doing Europe by bike goes with it.)

"Would you suggest Eurailpass for our son who is going to Europe on a 21-day excursion flight?"

There is a 21-day Eurailpass — unlimited first-class railroad travel in Western Europe. Depends, I suppose, on how much he intends to move around. It costs $99. You MUST buy it here. Any travel agent.

"We intend to have a Mexican party and would like a good tequila recipe."

Serve the tequila straight and use this chaser: Four cups of orange juice. One cup of lemon juice. One quarter cup of grenadine syrup — the kind they use in bars for cocktail mix. A half of a medium-sized onion minced. Two teaspoons of salt. One teaspoon of tabasco sauce.

Shake it up. Keep it chilled. And let it stand overnight — it's no good until the flavors blend. A sip of tequila, a sip of this chaser — it's called sangrita.

"We are thinking of a fall trip by car through Spain and Portugal. Would appreciate anything on routes and places to stay . . ."

You could start by renting a car in Madrid. Unless it's late fall, I'd stay north. Pretty hot south of the olive tree line. North to Burgos — great cathedral. To the walled city of Avila — spend some time walking around. To Salamanca — magnificent square. Have lunch there.

Cross the Portuguese border at Guarda. Over the mountains to Coimbra — old university town. To Lisbon. Go out via Elvas and the Spanish border at Badajoz. Back to Madrid through Merida and the Roman ruins.

Best (and cheapest) places to stay are the government-owned inns. Called pousadas in Portugal. Paradors in Spain. Their national tourist offices will give you maps and lists. These are inexpensive countries.

Roads are fair to good. Good driving because there isn't much traffic. Food is medium in the country. Spain cooks in deep olive oil, and it doesn't always suit our digestion. So you might learn to say "cook it in butter."

John Masefield Dead at 88

He Asked for 'Tall Ship' And Star to Steer Her By

ABINGDON, England (AP)—John Masefield, Britain's poet laureate whose verses sang of the lonely sea and tall ships, died Friday at 88.

He was 22nd in a line of official rhymers to the Crown that included Chaucer, Ben Jonson, Wordsworth, Scott and Tennyson. But he wore his honor lightly.

"The office of poet laureate is responsible for much of the world's worst literature," he once said. "Were it not for laureates, the anthologists of bad verse would be hard-put to fill their volumes."

Masefield considered himself mainly a storyteller and he cast his poems in simple rhymes and rhythms that had little to do with the complexities of modern poetry.

Some younger poets mocked his work as old-fashioned but generations read and memorized Sea Fever, perhaps his most notable poem.

"It began: "I must go down to the sea again, to the lonely sea and the sky

And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by."

In recent years, Masefield suffered from a weak heart and seldom left his country home near Abingdon. It was here that his condition worsened Friday morning.

Masefield was born in 1878, the son of a country lawyer in Shropshire. Orphaned, he went to sea as a cook when he was 14.

Years later he wrote: "No man can fail to feel for a ship as for a living thing. She is a living thing, almost a divine thing, who demands and receives service."

But Masefield wanted to see America and he went ashore in New York. For three years he lived as a hobo, working his way to the Pacific Coast and back as a farm hand.

In New York again, he worked as a saloon porter and in a carpet factory, educating himself by reading voraciously in his spare time. He said of his job in the saloon: "What I really did was to wash out cuspidors, sweep and scrub the floor, polish the footrails, wash glasses and pacify any warring factions."

Masefield returned to England in 1897, joined a newspaper and began to write poems and stories. His Salt Water Ballads came out five years later.

PROLIFIC WRITER

Over the years, he wrote 12 plays, 13 novels, 20 volumes of verse and numerous short stories and essays.

Critics acclaimed him and in 1930 King George V named him poet laureate. Many thought the title should have gone to Rudyard Kipling.

Masefield's duty as laureate was to produce formal verse on royal birthdays and state occasions. He said such odes lay largely outside his talents.

RECENT WRITING

His recent writing was scant. It included poems for Queen Elizabeth's marriage in 1947 when she was a princess, a tribute to Sir Winston Churchill in 1954; a poem to the Queen for her tour of Nigeria in 1956 and a sonnet for Princess Margaret's wedding in 1960.

Masefield was a teetotaler and he took in cash the traditional laureate's stipend of 130 gallons of wine a year. His annual royal salary totalled about $280.

In Garrison Affidavit

Oswald, Ruby Linked

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—District Attorney Jim Garrison said Friday Jack Ruby's unlisted private telephone number was found in code in Lee Harvey Oswald's notebook.

Garrison said the code used by Oswald has been broken.

OSWALD KILLER

The Warren commission in its report on the assassination of President Kennedy said there was no indication of any link between Oswald and Ruby. Oswald was identified in the report as the assassin.

Ruby shot and killed Oswald two days after Kennedy was killed Nov. 22, 1963.

The district attorney's assertion came in a document prepared for filing in Criminal District Court. The document was drawn up in answer to motions filed by lawyers for Clay L. Shaw, retired New Orleans executive charged with conspiring to kill Kennedy.

Garrison has charged that Oswald, Shaw and the late David W. Ferrie conspired in September, 1963, to kill Kennedy in Dallas. Shaw has denied the charge. Ferrie died Feb. 22 last.

Oswald's notebook, from which Garrison said the code was broken, was published in full in the Warren report.

Oswald used a code in his notebook "quite systematically, apparently for the purpose of concealing phone numbers he regarded as sensitive," Garrison said.

Parole Asked for Truscott

OTTAWA (Special) — New Democrat Stanley Knowles Friday night asked Parliament to do what the government has refused to do — parole Steven Truscott.

Mr. Knowles introduced a private members' bill called "An act for the parole of Steven Murray Truscott" that would give the problem to MPs for solution.

Parliament, as the highest court in the land, should be allowed to decide the issue, Mr. Knowles said.

The Supreme Court last week upheld the conviction of Truscott, now 22, for the rape-slaying of 12-year-old Lynne Harper at an RCAF base near Clinton, Ont., eight years ago.

The government has refused to intervene to parole Truscott, who continues to serve a life sentence in Collins Bay Penitentiary, with no hope of parole for at least two years.

The Knowles bill depends on government goodwill if it is to be debated in the Commons at all.

'TALKED OUT'

These bills are usually "talked out" and hardly ever brought to a vote.

In explaining his bill, Mr. Knowles said it makes no comment, directly or indirectly, on the verdict of the courts regarding Truscott's guilt or innocence.

"The courts have spoken," he said, "and Parliament is not being asked by this bill to set aside or alter the decisions of the courts."

HAS RIGHT

However, he added, Parliament does have the right to legislate with respect to the granting of parole.

"The purpose of this bill is to enable Parliament to express its will that Steven Truscott should now be granted parole from his imprisonment.

"The granting of this parole would not prejudice his right to continue to seek a new trial or to pursue any other legal course available to him."

Trudeau Eyes Indemnity Bid

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Trudeau says he is preparing a response to those who have suggested some system of payment to the victims of criminal acts. A difficulty in any such scheme was that under the constitution such payments might have to come from the provinces rather than the federal government.

Victim Believed Alive When Left on Rails

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Sheriff's detectives said a supermarket clerk was apparently robbed, slugged and then laid unconscious across a railroad track early Friday in Pico Rivera. His mangled body was discovered later by a train crew.

Pablo Luna, 27, of Huntington Beach, was last seen by his landlady Thursday, his day off. Detectives were seeking to learn how he got to Pico Rivera.

Union Pacific trainmen on a switch engine found the body Friday morning. The last train to pass previously was a freight which went through the intersection shortly after midnight.

Luna's wallet was rifled and his car missing. Members of his family knew of no reason for his being in Pico Rivera. He was to have been promoted from clerk to manager of a market in the Albertson chain on Monday, officers learned.

Nine Whales Swim Ashore

MANILA (UPI) — Nine whales swam ashore at Parola Beach at Negros Island in the central Philippines and at last reports were being guarded by policemen. Police said they suspect the whales may have swallowed two local fishermen who have been missing since May 8.

Lost in Huge Cave

Giant Shovel Digs For Missing Boys

HANNIBAL, Mo. (UPI) — While a giant mechanical hoe chopped into sinkholes in a new highway roadbed, rescue crews searched in a huge cave beneath the roadbed Friday night for three boys missing in Mark Twain country.

The earth-moving machine was thrown into use after a 48-hour search of mammoth, meandering Murphy Cave was abandoned. Plans to gouge into a bluff for an uncharted cavern in which the youths might be trapped also were abandoned.

LONG WAYS

Search authorities conferred, and were told that a cave found beneath the roadbed of a new highway did not extend only 100 feet as was first thought, but had tunnels stretching 1,000 feet from a sinkhole.

William Karras, chief of the searchers, said grey stone was found throughout the underground cave, which had ceilings 30 to 70 feet high. He said this stone was being used for fill in the construction of the roadbed, and this indicated there were numerous fissures in the ground.

THE BOYS

The boys—Joe Hoag, 13; his brother, Bill, 11; and their pal, Edward Dowell, 14—may have gone exploring in any of these fissures and could have been accidentally buried by construction equipment dumping fill, it was theorized.

A 150-man National Guard outfit was released by Missouri Gov. Warren Hearnes after its members tramped the cave-pocked hills day long in an unsuccessful search for the boys.

The boys had been missing since Wednesday afternoon, when they hurried home from school, changed clothes and set out on what their parents believed was a cave-exploring expedition.

Mafia Charges 'Big Headache'

MONTREAL (CP) — William Obront, mentioned by former justice minister Claude Wagner in the legislature when he spoke of "undesirables" doing business with Expo, says he would be a lot happier if he never heard of the world's fair.

Obront, who also is known as Butch Obie, said Thursday he is willing to sell his meat plant on the site—at cost.

"Not because of these charges by Wagner, which are false, the falsest I ever hear," he said, "but because it's nothing but a blasted headache."

EXPO BUSINESS

Mr. Wagner, Liberal member for Verdun, said Wednesday Obront and three other organizations do business at Expo, adding that "undesirables have succeeded in profitting from Expo facilities."

Speaking in the legislature a week ago, Mr. Wagner described Obront as a "notorious member of the Mafia."

Challenging Mr. Wagner to step out of the immunity of the legislature to repeat his charges, Mr Obront said:

LONG HOURS

"Look, I work here—in his Atwater market shop—from six in the morning till 11 at night. If that's what you've got to do to be in the Mafia, I quit.

"I own this business myself with my wife and my children. . . . I front for nobody.

"Sure, I know a lot of people, I'm not the type of guy to stay home and twiddle my thumbs . . . but knowing people and being partners with them is a heck of a lot different."

Tax Ruling Bolsters B.C. Mines

VANCOUVER—Strong among the mines were Brenda up .60 at 6.10, Lornex up .20 at 4.90 and Dynasty up .50 at 7.35. All three are likely to gain by promised delay in implementation of new mining tax recommendations.

Industrials were led ahead by Woodward at 30.75, up 1.25. B.C. Turf, Weldwood, MacMillan and Laurentide were others to advance.

Glamor Stocks Fade

TORONTO (CP)—Late session profit taking stalled a strong advance and the market closed with a modest gain.

Glamor issues held the spotlight for most of the session, but profit takers slashed their gains by a half.

ITL Industries moved up 1⅛ to 38⅛ after touching a high of 39⅞ and Magna Electronics ⅝ to 22¼ after it had touched 22⅞.

Among other industrials, Interprovincial Pipe Line added 2⅛ at 105, Thomson Newspapers 1⅛ at 38¼ after reaching a high of 39 and Westeel 1¼ at 23⅛.

Noranda Higher

MONTREAL (CP) — After a promising start, caused mainly by a revived senior mines section, stocks dipped back for the fourth straight day.

Senior mines started the day strongly following Finance Minister Sharp's pledge to make no changes in tax exemptions on new mines until at least 1974, but the section faltered later. Noranda climbed two points to 53¾ and Falconbridge Nickel ½ to 85½. Hollinger dipped ⅛ to 24 and International Nickel ¼ to 98⅛.

Canadian Imperial Commerce led banks higher with a one point win at 73⅝. Royal added ½ to 83.

Among industrials Du Pont fell two points to 35 and Dominion Bridge ½ to 20¼. Alcan slid ⅝ to 32⅛ and Steinberg's A ¼ to 22⅛.

Blue Chips Slide

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices closed slightly lower in active trading after profit taking erased an early advance.

Several high priced glamor stocks held early gains but the blue chips did not fare as well and ended with losses ranging from fractions to 4 points for Du Pont.

Late in the session the Federal Reserve Board announced a slight dip in industrial output for April, which added some downward pressure.

Steels, motors and chemicals were on a downbeat. Aircrafts had a good session and General Dynamics tacked on 1.

Pennsylvania Railroad jumped 2⅜ and its intended merger partner, New York Central, was up 1⅛. Airlines lost much of their early strength and finished mixed. Xerox jumped 5.

Port Trade Falls Off

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 3,632,909 tons of cargo handled in international seaborne shipping at Canadian ports during February, a 12.2 per cent decline from 4,140,060 tons handled in February last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports. Loadings were down 11 per cent while unloadings were reduced by 15.7 per cent.

Kaiser Wants Crows Nest Coal

U.S. Steel Giant Tries Again

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

For the second time within 10 years, the giant Kaiser corporation of the United States is trying to secure a toe-hold in British Columbia.

In 1960 it was thwarted in its efforts to build a dam on the Columbia river, where the Lower Arrow dam now is under construction as part of the Columbia treaty.

The federal government blocked the deal, because the Columbia — an international river — came under its jurisdiction, and for once Premier Bennett, who favored the Kaiser plan, was thwarted.

COAL FIELDS

This time Kaiser is planning to take over the coal fields of northeastern B.C. owned by the Crows Nest Industries Ltd., and once again the California giant is seeking to use the provincial government as a way to overcome possible Ottawa opposition.

What Kaiser plans to do is to develop the coal fields of the Fernie area on the strength of a 3,000,000-ton-a-year contract with Japanese steel-making firms.

COMPLEX PLAN

Instead of using the CPR to haul the coal to tidewater in B.C., Kaiser hopes to adopt the Crows Nest project of using the Great Northern facilities through the U.S. and to get the provincial government to build a deep sea wharf at Roberts Bank where the coal could be loaded into the 100,000-ton-plus bulk carriers for Japan.

The main Canadian objections so far have come from CPR, which has offered to move the coal to the coast at $4.80 a ton. Crow Nest says this is too high and that Great Northern facilities can deliver the coal to Roberts Bank at $4 a ton.

Crows Nest says this lower-cost transportation can be achieved even although it means the building of a 70-mile spur line from Natal to the U.S. border and then another spur from the existing GN line between Seattle and Vancouver to the proposed new dock.

Some Canadians are of the opinion it is unrealistic that Canadian coal should be moved by a U.S. railway when a Canadian line is available.

The question of building a dock at Roberts Bank at which the world's largest ships could dock is not likely to raise any deep objections, for sooner or later B.C. will require such facilities.

A BLESSING

As things now have turned out it was a blessing when the federal government declined to go along with the earlier Kaiser plans for damming the Columbia.

Kaiser wanted the dam to set up an aluminum plant in the State of Washington, and if the project had been authorized, it would have made the Columbia Treaty, as we now know it, an impossibility.

So far it seems the B.C. government spokesmen favor Kaiser participation in the coal deal, and once again perhaps the opposition will come from Ottawa.

JAPAN OIL HOPE

British Columbia has two main hopes of getting into the oil business in a big way, according to B. M. McGillivray, manager of the B.C. division of Canadian Petroleum.

One of these would be the discovery of oil off the B.C. coast, and the other would be the spilling over of the Rainbow Lake-Zama Lake oil field over the Alberta border into B.C.

Mr. McGillivray presented his views the other day in Vancouver at a 1967 symposium on World Trade at the B.C. international trade fair.

He was hopeful that both might happen.

FAVORABLE BASIN

He said the coast off B.C. was in a very favorable sedimentary basin for the discovery of oil, and that the large capital being provided by Shell Canada Ltd. for the search was promising.

The discovery of light-gravity crude in the the northeastern corner of B.C. was also quite probable, and he said the proximity of existing oil wells to the B.C. border had rather discounted the earlier opinion that this area of B.C. was likely to provide plenty of gas but little oil.

The Banff Oil Company, which has important interests at Rainbow, has expressed the view that one-quarter of the tremendous oil reserves of the Rainbow area might be found in B.C.

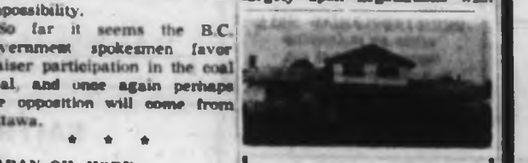

Finding a market for new sources of B.C. oil might be difficult, and would depend largely upon negotiations with the U.S., but he also foresaw some hope in the Japanese market.

Mr. McGillivray said Japan was mainly using Middle East crude that has a high sulphur content, and with the country facing a serious air pollution problem in its heavily populated areas, it might have to turn away from the sour mideast crude and find an alternate supply of light sweet crudes that would cause less pollution and which could be obtained from British Columbian and Canadian oil fields.

A study made by OECD in Paris last year indicated that by 1970 Japan would be importing 1,320,000,000 barrels of oil a year against its current imports of about 800,000,000 barrels.

Pentecost Means Fiftieth

What is the meaning of Pentecost? It comes from the Greek word meaning 50th. Pentecost is an important Jewish and Christian feast.

In the Jewish calendar it comes 50 days after Passover and marks the closing of the Palestinian harvest, a period of 49 days or seven weeks.

In the Christian calendar Pentecost falls on the seventh Sunday after Easter. Eastern Orthodox churches use a different calendar and celebrate it later than western churches. Some years the dates coincide.

SECOND CHAPTER

The day of Pentecost marks the event described in the second chapter of the Book of Acts when, 50 days after the resurrection, the spirit of the Holy Ghost descended on the followers of Jesus who were gathered together to celebrate the age-old festival.

Many historians date the beginning of the Christian Church from that event.

St. Paul's Minister Re-enacts Parable

Parable of talents was re-enacted at St. Paul's United Church, Sidney, when Rev. Howard McDiarmid handed $10 bill to every member attending recent Sunday service. Mr. McDiarmid seeks to prove parable is as valid today as it was 1,630 years ago. Recipients are asked to put money to good use and return with interest next Thanksgiving Day. Joan Gardner and Ronald Hills were two who were given chance to see what they could do with it.—(Agnes Flett)

Mother of Year Chosen Sunday

Mother of the Year will be chosen Sunday at a combined service of Glad Tidings Sunday school and church as a special tribute to all mothers.

Members of the congregation have been asked to nominate women who have fulfilled the role of mother with exceptional success and have made some particular contribution through their lives to the work of the church.

A board of judges has been appointed to study all names submitted and to select the one to whom the award will be given.

Three Observances Set

Victoria churches this Sunday — Whitsunday — will observe Pentecost, Mother's Day and Industrial Thanksgiving Sunday.

"Our Lord called into being a company of believers," Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral says. "It was composed of people who knew themselves to have been redeemed by Christ and who knew that they were to be used by Him to redeem others.'

"It came into existence at Pentecost and has been in the world ever since, with people of every generation entering into it. It is called the Church. We remember its founding Sunday."

Confirmation service will be held at the cathedral Sunday. Thirty candidates will enter upon the full communicant life of the church.

* * *

Mother, His Counsellor will be Rev. W. P. Morton's theme at 9:30 a.m. in Stevenson Memorial Baptist Church. Chaplain W. J. Bingham will preach on Three Slogans at 11 a.m. in Emmanuel Baptist Church.

At the evening service another guest minister, Major D. Martin, will speak on The Enemy Fear.

Mother's Day will be observed at the morning service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Rev. Bruce Molloy will speak on A Tale of Three Cities.

In the evening, members and friends of the Religion-Labor Council of Victoria will hold an Industrial Thanksgiving service at 7:30. Guest preacher will be Rev. Dr. Donald Smith of Knox Church, Port Alberni. The Church and Industrial Life will be his topic. John Nicol, past president of the council, will read the lesson.

At 8:50 p.m., a panel of three speakers will consider The Place of Youth in Industry and Employment.

Members are George Bevis, director of Victoria Manpower Centre, Prof. Gordon Bertram, head of the political science department at the University of Victoria and Gordon Callow, second-year Arts student at the university.

Mother's Day is the topic for Dr. Emma M. Smiley at 11 a.m. in Victoria Truth Centre. Her topic at 7:30 p.m. will be How About That?

* * *

In Trinity Presbyterian Church Rev. Gilbert Smith will give his Mother's Day sermon with a description of an Irish pilgrimage in which he visited the famous cottage in Antrim immortalized in the book My Lady of the Chimney Corner. The author, Alexander Irvine, pays a moving tribute to his mother, Anna, whose greatness overcomes the obstacles of poverty and lack of education.

* * *

In Centennial United Church the film Nobody Waved Goodbye will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. The movie tells the story of a boy who rebels against middle-class conventions and goals.

* * *

In First Baptist Church, Rev. John A. Watson will consider the question Who Am I? at the morning service.

"The search for the answer expresses itself in many ways today," Mr. Watson says. "It is seen in such catch words as sit-ins, love-ins, dropouts, turned off, turned on. There is no lack of attempt to analyze."

"We will open our minds to the answer that the gospel gives to the question." Mr. Watson has chosen Mark 5:1 to 20, the story of Christ delivering the possessed of the legion of devils.

* * *

In Metropolitan Church, Rev. E. Laura Butler will speak on Society's Call to The Home at the 11 a.m. family service. The junior teen choir will sing Bless This House.

At 7 p.m. there will be a panel discussion on Our Greatest Resource — The Home. Members of the Metropolitan Couples Clubs will take part. The sanctuary choir, directed by Frank Tupman with Eric Boothroyd at the organ, will sing Be Ye All Of One Mind.

* * *

Pentecost Sunday is the subject of Rev. R. J. D. Morris' sermon meditation at 9:30 and 11 a.m. in First United Church.

At 9:30 a.m. Hi-C members Joan Gray, Pat Garrison, Joanne Jenkins and Phil Squires will share in the conduct of the service. At 11 a.m., Logan Mayhew will share.

At 7:30 p.m., Rev. Marvin Fowler will speak on Fire On The Earth.

Parlors For Worship?

HAMILTON (CP) — Church buildings are not necessary for worship, and some day may not be available, T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, said here recently.

"The day may come when we may worship in private homes, beer parlors, dance halls, on beaches—wherever we find people," Mr. Douglas told a meeting of church officials.

The former Saskatchewan premier, himself an ordained Baptist minister, warned that the church must be prepared to adapt its ministry to meet changing conditions.

Anglicans Aid Miners' Kin

The Anglican Church of Canada will assist families of coal miners who died in explosions at the Balmer North Mine in Michel, B.C., April 3.

The church's Primate's World Relief Fund has made a grant of $2,500 as a token of Anglican concern for the bereaved families.

The mine is located in the diocese of Kootenay and the money was made available to Bishop E. W. Scott of Kootenay, who has given it to the disaster fund.

For the last several years the Primate's World Relief Fund has made grants averaging $300,000 a year to alleviate human distress in the world.

Full Story of LSD Still to Be Told

Inquests are in progress into the deaths of two youths who took LSD, Sidney Katz writes in the latest issue of Trend, a special youth supplement to Canadian Churchman, the Anglican Church publication.

These inquests were under way as he wrote, in Toronto and Edmonton. There have been others and Mr. Katz believes there will be more.

The social affairs writer says he believes that, wisely and cautiously employed, LSD may prove to be a boon to mankind as an adjunct to psychotherapy.

DOES NOTHING

But, he says, the drug does nothing for the unprepared mind.

"At the very most the claim can be that, in some instances, a highly talented and creative artist, who has mastered the techniques of his art, may derive certain added insights from the chemical," he writes.

But an LSD user often suffers the delusion that he has become creative under its influence.

"What really happens is that he has lost his critical, discriminating capacity and this enables him to discern genius in his handiwork."

The writer, who says he has received confidential information from "anguished relatives and friends about the havoc being wrought by mind-expanding chemicals," predicts more tragedies unless teenagers, parents, doctors, clergy and public officials approach problems realistically.

For the most part, he concludes, psychedelic substances are being used destructively.

"The full story of suicides, accidents, disrupted lives and mental breakdown precipitated by the use of LSD has yet to be told."

New Zealand Talks Union

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuters) — An act-of-commitment service between five denominations has been held at St. Paul's Cathedral. More than 700 persons attended the service, held to seek a basis for union and ways of common action between the Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational and Episcopal churches and the Associated Churches of Christ.

Youth Week Designated

The Unitarian Church of Victoria has designated Monday to Thursday Youth Week. All services at the church will be conducted by the Liberal Religious Youth Group composed of high school age young people. Leighton Ford Assails Playboy's Philosophy

The philosophy of Playboy publisher Hugh Heffner was assailed this week by Leighton Ford, associate evangelist of Billy Graham, when he opened a three-week crusade in Seattle's Centre Arena.

Heffner says "a woman is a thing," Dr. Ford said. Under these conditions, she could not be respected as a person.

"God made us to love people and use things. Instead we love things and use people," the evangelist said.

"The Bible tells us that man was made in the image of God. But when society forgets that every man bears this image of God, trouble starts. Our view of man decides how we live."

Dr. Ford will speak in the Seattle Arena at 7:30 p.m. nightly until May 28.

'To Live with Uncertainty Is a Sign of Maturity'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since the Apostle Paul declared that "now we see through a glass darkly," Christianity has recognized that its defined doctrines were imperfect reflections of what basically remains mystery.

Yet efforts to express and illuminate its truths have been made through the centuries, in councils, creeds and articles of faith. Today, many church thinkers are wrestling anew with the problem — to state beliefs better.

Amid the reappraisals, and the sometimes disturbed reactions to them, a controversial Canadian priest has urged that the churches quit prescribing specific interpretations.

"The church should stop presuming to be the 'answer man,'" said Rev. Ernest Harrison, an Anglican clergyman of Toronto. "Its proper function is to be a community of searchers, welcoming all serious viewpoints."

WAS BARRED

Harrison, a bespectacled man of 50, whose ideas have resulted in his being barred from ministerial functions in the Toronto diocese, said Christianity's "big challenge now is to live with uncertainty."

He added: "To live with uncertainty is a sign of maturity."

Here in connection with the issuance of his new book, A Church Without God, published by Lippincott, he said in an interview that the church can no longer be absolute about doctrines.

CAN'T SAY

"It can't say that one view is right and another wrong, that there is only one true view. Life has shown us that nobody has the final answers for all time, that we learn from experience and each other.

"Instead of force - feeding answers, the church ought to offer a choice. It should open its gates and recognize the legitimacy of many more rooms of differing understanding."

Asked how this would differ from the unitarian-universalist outlook, which meshes many religious views, he said he didn't advocate a blend of concepts, but rather a diverse "pluralistic church," ranging from highly orthodox parishes to wide-open ones.

"The full spectrum," he said. "I don't see why it should be so difficult. After all, each of us is different."

In his book, he discounts many standard doctrinal formulations, including Christ's divinity.

DOCTRINES IN DOUBT

"Almost every point raised in the creeds is doubted by vast numbers of Christians," he maintains. "Some are strongly denied. Some, like the virgin birth, are received in lukewarm fashion. . . . Yet they are still announced as doctrines of the church.

"If the church were seriously accepted as the 'people of God,' then all their feelings, reactions and thoughts would be represented in its teachings. But this has not happened."

Consequently, he adds, many Christians "are trapped."

LOUD CRIES

"For, in spite of the loud cries of heresy, they do not feel like heretics. They feel like Christians. They feel that they are as much entitled to membership in their church as those who condemn them."

Such feelings are shared by Harrison, who himself was forced to resign his post as general secretary of his church's board of religious education last fall after 10 fellow theologians called him a heretic.

"Do not be driven out," he advises. He adds that "mother church is dead" in the sense of being able to impose fixed beliefs. "Any threats that are sounded in her name are idle ones."

He questions such classical Christian teachings as the resurrection, life after death and maintains "there is no God" in the traditional sense of a "grand being" apart from men, judging, punishing and helping them.

"God is not something other than mankind," he said.

HIS VIEW OF GOD

He lists various concepts of God which he regards as a Christian, including:

● The traditional view of a "person other than man, greater than man, who has no beginning and no end, who made the universe" and still "survives His creation, guiding mankind and revealing Himself."

● The view that God exists, but that traditional theology "has missed the boat in describing Him," and that the big job now is to describe Him more accurately and relevantly to modern man.

● That the word "God has meaning" and that descriptions must be sought within man himself, "in the depth of our being, our ultimate concern," in natural sciences and human relationships.

● That God described by early theology "did indeed exist, but that He no longer exists," having died into human history in the incarnation of Christ as man.

Harrison said his own concept of God was as a "source that lies within creation, within the human race," and not a being apart from humanity.

"Human beings themselves are aware of elements in life beyond themselves," he said. "When we go into depth analyses, we become aware of this dimension, of extra - sensory perception and many other areas of psychological research.

"We discover huge areas of life that are part of us but which can't be explained in human terms, and I don't think they ever will be. The more we discover, the larger are the areas of the unknown."

WHAT I NEED

I need courage, when the best things fail me; calm and poise, when storms assail me; common sense, when things perplex me; a sense of humor, when they vex me; hope, when disappointment dampens me; wider vision when life cramps me; kindness, when folks need it badly; readiness to help men gladly. And, when effort seems in vain, wisdom to begin again. —From The War Cry of The Salvation Army.

Each Family Bringing 'Loaf of Bread' Today

Each family of the Victoria Seventh-day Adventist Church will bring a loaf of bread to church today.

But it won't be the edible kind. The loaf, in fact, is a small light-brown plastic bank holding the family's contribution to the annual Disaster and Famine Relief Offering of SAWS, the Seventh-day Adventist Relief Service.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. J. M. LeMarquand of the local welfare centre at 1117 Blanshard says Adventist churches around the world expect to receive $300,000 in the special offering.

Last year SAWS distributed $2,900,000 worth of clothing, bedding, food, medical supplies and cash to disaster victims around the world.

★ ★ ★

The aid was given without regard to race, color or creed in nearly 200 countries where the Adventist church has organized work.

Contributions will come from 116,000 loaf banks distributed this year in Canada and the U.S.

Esquimalt Church Being Renovated

Victoria Foursquare Gospel Church on Esquimalt Road is in the middle of a face-lifting job which will last for about three months.

The pastor, Rev. J. W. Wray, said the church is removing an old annex which is to be replaced by a small addition which will give extra room for Sunday school and youth facilities.

When completed, the alterations will provide accommodation in the main chapel for 100 persons. Small rooms are now being removed to provide a larger central room.

The main entrance, now on Esquimalt Road, will be moved to the side of the building and the whole exterior will be re-styled.

A distinctive feature of the renovations will be a cross 22 feet high which will rest on the ground in front of the church and will be floodlit at night.

Mr. Wray said services are being carried on as usual during alterations.

Church Marks 76 Years In James Bay

James Bay United Church is celebrating its 76th anniversary at the 11 a.m. service Sunday, and the minister, Rev. H. T. Allen, celebrates 44 years of ministry in the province.

Mr. Allen says it was in mid-May, 1891, that the Methodist Conference of British Columbia declared James Bay to be a circuit of the Methodist Church.

The previous year, a Sunday school had been started by the young people of the Epworth League of the church.

YOUNG PEOPLE

"Among these families were the David Spencers," Mr. Allen said Friday. "Eleven of those young people were members of the choir. Chris Spencer first played a church organ here."

Alone among the earliest people still remaining a steady member is Mrs. F. J. Schroeder, still bright and cheery as she nears her mid-eighties.

Mr. Allen will preach the anniversary sermon, The Christian Faith: Healing, Heaven and the Light to The World.

LEAVE WORK

He will leave his work with the congregation on June 18, after nearly four years. He and Mrs. Allen plan an extensive three-month holiday, driving in Eastern Canada to visit sons and brothers.

Mrs. Winnifred Snape will be soloist at the anniversary service and the junior choir will sing.

Expo '67 Hospitality Offered by Churches

Two United Churches in Montreal are offering accommodation to church members in private church homes during Expo 67.

They are Erskine and American United Church, 3407 Ontario Avenue, Montreal 25, and St. Lambert United Church, 435 Mercille Avenue, St. Lambert, Que.

★ ★ ★

Inquiries are being handled by Expo committees at the two churches and should be addressed to them.

For those not too demanding in privacy, Rosedale United Church, 4650 Rosedale Ave., Montreal 28, is setting up 60 cots from June 1 to Aug. 31 in its hall. Guests must bring their own sleeping bags or bedding but showers are available.

★ ★ ★

The cost is only $3 a night, with half paid in advance with registration. Rev. D. Burns at Rosedale is looking after bookings. The accommodation is designed for groups but the facilities are open to individuals.

Good Harness Is God's Law

Riding easy in a harness is a form of freedom, Thomas A. McClain told an audience at First Church of Christ Scientist in Victoria this week.

He took the expression from a quotation of Robert Frost, the American poet.

When asked by a reporter what freedom was, the poet replied: "To me, freedom means riding easy in the harness."

WAS REPORTER

Present at the interview was Mr. McClain, then a newspaper reporter himself. He never forgot the answer.

"Maybe some of you are bothered by this idea of being in a harness," he told his Victoria audience. "We generally think of a harness as restrictive and think that the less harnessed we are the more freedom we enjoy."

He said the famous poet didn't seem to be concerned with the fact of being harnessed. "He's concerned with how we're taking the ride."

GUIDE CONTROL

The purpose of a harness, the lecturer noted, is to guide, control and protect. "The real harness in which man rides is the harness of Truth."

"When you let God's law govern your everyday life, you ride easy in the harness. This brings a spiritual freedom that, essentially, is the freedom to be yourself—your true self."

This is the freedom the poet had in mind, Mr. McClain said, "the freedom we all seek—the freedom we find in fulfilment of ourselves, of what we really are, of what God created us to be."

Mission Launch Readied

A new mission launch, Northern Light, will be launched in Vancouver next week. The boat will visit isolated members of the Seventh-day Adventist Church on the B.C. coast and will provide food, clothing and medical supplies for families in need.

The launching will be one of the events of the 8th Quadrennial General Session of the church, being held from Tuesday to Saturday in Central Seventh-day Adventist Church, 5352 Baillie.

Going from Vancouver Island are T. J. Bradley and H. C. White of Sidney; A. J. Mustard of Victoria and G. C. Smedley of Parksville.

One in 50 Victorians Baseball's Proud Boast

It's a familiar scene in Greater Victoria area

By ROBIN JEFFREY

Keep it quiet, colonel, because if this gets out there won't be a pukka sahib between Poona and Pondicherry willing to call Victoria his home.

Gunga Din will throw away his stumps. The road to Mandalay will be strewn with discarded cricket bats.

It's about this game—baseball, you know.

Baseball — whisper it!—is Victoria's dominant summer sport. Enough to turn your port wine to vinegar, isn't it?

Indeed, Victoria probably has the most comprehensive minor baseball program in Canada, maybe in North America.

Look at the figures, colonel. There are 3,000 kids playing baseball in Greater Victoria. That's two per cent of the total population. That's nearly as many baseball players as colonels, colonel.

When did it start?

In 1953 — about the same time the British Empire was dissolving into the Commonwealth. But most authorities agree that had nothing to do with it.

In 1953 the Jaycee Little League park at Cook and Hillside began operation and provided facilities for about 100 boys.

FULL CONCENTRATION

But the real spread didn't come until about 1958, when most of the 13 Little Leagues functioning today started.

Those 13 eagues involve about 2,200 boys and 150 teams. And remember, colonel, each team has at least one adult coach.

"This is one of the few areas in North America with full concentration," explains Wilf Cain, Island and Canadian Little League director. "That is, there are more Little Leagues than a population of our size usually requires."

After Little League, which takes boys 12 and under, there are four other groups: Pony League (13 and 14 year olds), Babe Ruth League (13-15), Colt League (15-16) and Connie Mack League (16-18).

There are three Pony and three Babe Ruth Leagues in the area, plus a Colt League and a Connie Mack League. They total about 50 teams and another 800 players.

AMAZING GROUP

These leagues are all members of the Victoria Baseball Association, an astonishing sort of group which is probably the biggest factor in Victoria's baseball boom.

For example, in the last three years the VBA has plopped $42,000 into parks and baseball facilities.

Formed about eight years ago, the association is now incorporated under the B.C. Societies Act and has continued to grow — in stature and finances.

Its chief sources of revenue are regular bingo sessions, while it also finances an annual car raffle for its member leagues.

The VBA, which has no national affiliations, "just sort of evolved," says secretary Ted McConnan. "I believe there is something similar to this in Portland, but that's the only other place we know about."

The association forms a clearinghouse and meeting ground for its member leagues, but there's little love between the VBA and the local Little League organization. Little Leagues are not permitted to affiliate themselves with the association.

OPPOSING VIEWS

Cain says it's an international Little League rule, while VBA members say local Little League chiefs want to keep their organization outside the pale.

But on the basis of statistics, Little League seems to be missing a good thing.

In the last three years, the VBA had donated $4,355 worth of baseballs to its member leagues, and divided $11,035 among them from car raffles.

It has established a rapport with area park boards which association president Gar Taylor describes as "tremendous. We co-operate on everything. They know who they're dealing with and so do we. Sometimes it only takes a phone call to straighten out a problem."

In the last three years, the VBA has helped park construction in the area by $8,650, the biggest chunk ($2,200) going into the lower field at Topaz Park.

SHARE WEALTH

Its other projects have involved helping hard-up member leagues, umpire and training schools, six scholarships of $100 each at the high school level, and $1,000 worth of portable bleachers.

Finally the association insures its nine member leagues as a group and thus obtains a saving on premiums.

It's a fair-sized operation, and none of its workers — except the professional ticket-seller it hires for the annual car raffle — are paid.

But the association is probably responsible for the continued success and solvency of a minor baseball program that may be the strongest on the continent.

Rake Ready for Use On Victoria's Leafs

By JIM TANG

A history-making Western Hockey League meeting which is likely to change considerably the look of minor professional hockey is only a couple of days away but all that's being admitted officially is that Oakland Seals will be playing in the new National Hockey League division next season.

It can, however, be said that Victoria Maple Leafs will also be among the missing when the WHL or whatever league the WHL survivors will be in, goes to the post next October.

PHOENIX IN

And barring the completely unexpected, one can scratch the name of the Los Angeles Blades and add the Phoenix Seals, or whatever the new Arizona club will be called.

There has been nothing official yet on the status of the Victoria Maple Leafs but the word is out that Toronto Maple Leafs are packing it in here after three seasons of financial failure.

Whether the announcement will be made before the WHL meeting opens on Tuesday is not known. Punch Imlach, general-manager and coach of the Toronto club, is en route to Portland via Tulsa and isn't expected to come to Victoria until late next week.

COULD BE SOONER

But Toronto-president Stafford Smythe is reported heading for Portland by way of Victoria and could possibly make the announcement prior to the WHL meeting.

That it is coming is pretty well generally known. Other clubs are working on plans which don't include Victoria next season and the long-standing rumor that Toronto will at least have a partial working agreement with Vancouver Canucks has been recently strengthened by developments and statements in other centres.

MAJOR ISSUE

As for the Blades, they are almost certainly out but cannot be counted out until some disposition is made about idemnity claims the WHL has made on the NHL for the loss of the Los Angeles territory.

The NHL has awarded a Los Angeles franchise to Jack Kent Cooke, who has his Kings in the formative stage and is building a new arena. However, the WHL says it will go to court if no indemnity is paid and until the thing is settled, it's always possible that the Blades could be back.

If Cooke and the NHL are adamant about not paying indemnity it is possible that the NHL would go without the Kings, which could put the Blades back in the WHL picture.

More likely is that the problem will be settled. The Oakland club paid indemnity last year and as part of the agreement of that settlement was given permission to put a WHL farm club in Phoenix.

Off what is likely to happen, the WHL will be left with franchises in Vancouver, Portland, Seattle, San Diego and Phoenix. Where it will go from there is something the league itself does not seem sure of at the moment.

AMALGAMATION?

Best guess at the moment is that the WHL and the American Hockey League will come to terms about an amalgamation which would set up two divisions playing an interlocking schedule.

The Western division would be made up of the five clubs mentioned above and the Eastern division would consist of Baltimore, Buffalo, Cleveland, Rochester and Hershey.

If amalgamation plans, which will be discussed again in Portland Monday fall through, the WHL would probably take in another club and go as a six-team league. It has another franchise application from Fresno to fall back on.

But whatever happens you won't find Victoria in the WHL tables next season.

According to the Solunar Tables calculated for this area, the best times for hunting and fishing today and tomorrow will be as follows (Times shown are Daylight Saving Time):

TODAY

For a while Friday, Red Lion Inn should have been named Luckies.

But it was only for a while. Luckies made a break pay off by scoring two unearned runs in the fifth inning to hand Red Lions their sixth straight loss, 2-0.

Getting sharp three-hit pitching from Bob Haldane, Luckies loaded the bases with nobody out in the third inning on three consecutive infield errors but Red Lions managed to get out of the jam without giving up a run.

In the fifth, losing pitcher Gordy Gray opened the inning by striking out Haldane but Terry Manns reached first on an error to shortstop Bill Mundie.

Joe Paterson then singled and Lyall Connett drove in both base runners with a single after catcher Ralph Branting had flied out.

Their experience paid off Friday as Rye pitched a four-hitter to give Sooke Forest Products an 8-2 victory over Nelsons and sole possession of first place in the Stuffy McGinnis Senior Men's League.

Sloan scored the winning run in the third inning after leading with a single.

Another Try Tonight By Surgenor

Ross Surgenor, the Island's leading stock car driver for the past two seasons, will be out to regain a little lost prestige tonight at Western Speedway.

Two weeks ago, on the first night of the season, Surgenor managed to win only the trophy dash and finished fourth in the feature race.

Surgenor and Don Cummins, owner of the Ford Surgenor drives, have spent a fair amount of time recently trying to add power.

Time trials begin at 7 p.m., and about 50 cars are expected to compete.

Get 17 Hits, Allow One—

Orioles Finally Break Loose

Baltimore Orioles are in the basement but the defending American League champions finally broke out of their slump last night.

With Jim Palmer allowing but one hit and facing the minimum of 27 batters, the Orioles routed New York Yankees with a 17-hit attack. Palmer lost his no-hitter when Horace Clarke led off the seventh inning with a single. But Clarke was erased by a double play and was the only Yankee to reach base. Paul Blair had four hits and Frank Robinson three as both drove in four runs.

Meanwhile Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox continued to make it more of a two-team race.

Tigers, winners of their last six games and nine of their last 10, scored three of their runs without a hit and a fourth on an error in squeezing past Boston's fumbling Red Sox, 5-4.

TYPICAL WIN

As for the White Sox, they got five-hit pitching from Joe Horlen, now 4-0 this season, and the first run batted in this year by J. C. Martin as they took California Angeles, 1-0. Martin doubled in the fifth inning after an error by Jim Fregosi.

Cincinnati Reds maintained their lead in the National League when Don Pavletich drove in three runs with a double and bases-loaded single in a 4-2 verdict over Philadelphia Phillies.

Billy O'Dell pitched the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-2 win over Atlanta Braves, never losing the lead after Matty Alou and Roberto Clemente hit third-inning home runs.

St. Louis Cardinals stayed firmly in third place, scoring five runs in the eighth inning to take New York Mets, 7-5.

A three-run homer by ex-Card Jerry Buchek gave the Mets a 5-2 lead. Singles by Julian Javier, pinch-hitter Dave Ricketts, Lou Brock, Curt Flood and Mike Shannon, a base on balls and a double by Roger Maris did in the Mets.

San Francisco Giants had Juan Marichal ready to pitch again and slipped by Houston Astros, 6-1, as Marichal recorded his fifth win in a row after losing his first three decisions.

Willie Mays hit his 545th career home run in the seventh inning to account for three runs.

After Mays' home run, Houston reliever Claude Raymond hit Jim Hart and Ollie Brown with pitches and Brown was carried from the field bleeding from the mouth.

Goalkeeper Blamed As Marrs Blanked

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Goalkeeper Johnny Adams emerged as the goat in Port Arthur Marrs' 6-0 loss to Toronto Marlboros in the Memorial Cup here Friday.

The victory gave Toronto a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven junior hockey final. The fifth game is Sunday.

The crowd of 5,300 blamed Adams for Toronto's first two goals, and he was removed after the sixth goal early in the third period.

Richie Bayes beat Adams to a loose puck to open the scoring at 5:33 of the first period, and two minutes later Terry Caffery beat the Port Arthur goalie on the short side during a power play.

Bayes and Tom Martin each scored twice with Doug Acomb getting the other goal.

In Oak Bay Track Meet

Ten School Records Smashed

Ten records were set as House II won the Oak Bay High School annual track and field meet for the fifth consecutive year.

Bill McCormick, holder of the Canadian juvenile high jump record, led the record breakers by setting new marks in both the high jump and discus senior events. However, Bruce Panton won the senior boys aggregate championship and Bruce Howe claimed runner-up honors. Howe set a new mark in the broad jump of 20 feet, nine inches.

Brian Thomas edged out Dave Weicker for junior boys honors while breaking one of the oldest records on the books.

Thomas ran the 100-yard dash in 10.4 to better the time Victoria's sprinting star, Bob Hutchison, set in 1948.

Lyn Jones was the only House II competitor to win an individual title, taking senior girls honors with a comfortable lead over teammate Sally Glover.

Maureen Wills gave House IV a second individual championship by edging out teammate Linda Roberts for junior girls honors in the closest competition in the meet.

House II swept to victory with a comfortable margin, finishing with 166¾ points. House IV finished second with 127½ points followed by House III with 112 and House I with 104.

Miss Jones set a new mark of 16 feet, 5¼ inches in the broad jump and Miss Roberts raised the junior broad jump standard to 15 feet, 10⅛ inches.

Other record setting performances came from Jacquie Farris, Linda Robertson, Colleen Davies and the House II senior girls relay team.

Misses Robertson and Davies won the girls open 440 and 880-yard events, which were run for the first time this year.

Jacquie Farris won the junior girls discus event with a toss of 105 feet, three inches.

City Youth Track Ace In Oregon

Victoria's Bob McLaren, in his first year of a Business and Technology Degree program at Oregon State, is the university's leading intermediate hurdler.

The 1963 Oak Bay High School graduate won the 440-yard hurdles in last weekend's dual meet against University of Oregon in 52.2 seconds, his fastest time to date.

Oregon States's record for the event is 51.0.

McLaren is third among his teammates in the 440 and 220-yard dashes with times of 48.1 and 21.7.

Junior pole vaulter Dennis Phillips became the seventh man in the world to clear 17-feet as Oregon State edged their rivals, 73-72, to win their sixth meet against one loss in the tough Pacific-8 Conference.

Knudson Pops Ahead With Nicklaus Next

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—George Knudson, a slender, freckle-faced Torontonian, played with a glove for the first time in four years and fired a six-under-par 66 Friday to take the second-round lead in the $100,000 Greater New Orleans open golf tournament.

Coupled with his opening-round 71, it gave the 29-year-old Knudson, last year's Canada Cup champion, 137 for 36 holes.

HOLES FROM TRAP

Jack Nicklaus forged into contention when he holed out from the sand trap on No. 9, which he played as his last hole of the day. He finished with a 68 and was just one stroke behind Knudson.

Left-handed Bob Charles, the former British Open champion from New Zealand, and tour regular Johnny Pott both carded 68s and were tied with Nicklaus for second.

Frank Beard, winner of two tournaments in the last month, carded a 71 after taking two penalty strokes. He went into the water on one hole and was lodged behind a tree on another.

BAD SLIP

Beard had shared the first-round lead with Gardner Dickinson, who ballooned to a 74 Friday for a 142.

Beard's 71 put him two strokes behind Knudson. With him at 140 was Mason Rudolph who won this tournament three years ago.

Alone at 140 was 22-year-old Allan Henning of South Africa, who shot 71 over the 7,020-yard Lakewood Country Club course, played short because of concrete-hard fairways.

RUBBED OFF

Knudson said he decided Friday to play with a glove after he noticed the clubs kept slipping out of his hand.

"I used a Palmer glove," he joked, "and played just like Arnie."

Knudson's best finish this year has been a tie for second in the Citrus Open at Orlando, Fla. He shot a 66 in the final round there, and that was his best round of the year until Friday.

Knudson's round included an eagle on the second hole when he sank a nine-iron shot from 110 yards out. He had a 40-foot birdie putt on No. 6 and a pair of three-footers at seven and eight to tour the front nine in 32, four under regulation.

On the back side, Knudson birdied at 12 with a six-foot putt and canned a 12-footer at 14 and two-putted on the par five 14th for two other birds.

With Beard and Rudolph at 139 was Jacky Cupit, who shot a 67.

Billy Casper, who shot a 70 for 143, maintained a safe lead for the special All - America Gold Cup. Arnold Palmer was leading in the competition for the $5,000 first prize Gold Cup but bypassed this tournament.

The All-America Cup goes to the golfer with the lowest aggregate score for the Masters, PGA, U.S. Open and Greater New Orleans Open.

Last Chance

Final registrations for players in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League will be held today at lower Beacon Hill Park diamond between 10 a.m. and 12 noon.

All interested players are urged to register and are requested to bring spikes and gloves.

Dave Close, Maureen Chan Take Honors at Vic High

House I produced both individual champions and romped away with the team title at the Victoria High School track and field meet Friday.

House I finished with 413⅛ points. House IV was second with 298, House III third at 277½ and House II fourth at 246½.

Dave Close of House I took the boys' individual award with 56⅛ points, 4½ better than housemate Rick Couch. Brian Robinson of House IV placed third with 34½ points.

In the girls' division, Maureen Chan of House I captured individual honors with 67 points. Sandy Mottishaw was second with 51 and Barb Hallberg third with 50½.

Only one "A" flight record fell — in the boys' 440-yard relay, where the potent House I team finished in 46.5 seconds, two-tenths of a second better than the former mark, set in 1959 by House II.

Three records fell and one was tied at the Mount View High School track and field meet Friday.

Cam More knocked seven seconds off the junior 880 yards with a 2:17 time, and Ron Davis cleared 9'10" in the open pole vault, three inches better than the old mark.

Roger Barnett won the senior boy's aggregate, and Heather Wood led the senior girls. Janet Joseph took the junior girls' award.

Cascade won the meet with 514 points, followed by Olympics with 133½, Rockies 121½ and Selkirks 79.

Mustang Runs Wild

WEST LOS ANGELES — Lady May Lawford has smashed up two brand new cars in the last six weeks but she isn't worried.

The same could not be said for car salesman Robert Franks, who sold her both automobiles.

Franks delivered a brand new Mustang to her residence here, only to see it coming at him "like a shot."

He dodged it, but the Mustang hit an apartment building, caused $1,000 damage and narrowly missed Franks. All this was happening while Lady Lawford, mother of actor Peter Lawford, was backing out of a garage.

But after hitting the apartment, the Mustang reversed direction and again came at the salesman, settling for his car. There was $500 damage to it, while the Mustang was a total loss.

A similar fate befell a new Fairlane convertible in April at the same location, although Franks wasn't present.

Bridge King in Form

A Victorian teamed with an international expert from Dallas won the mixed pairs bridge championship at the Empress Hotel, Thursday.

Mrs. Marianne Powell, a bridge player of eight years, gave most of the credit to her partner, bridge king Oswald Jacoby, whom she called "fabulous."

One hundred and ten pairs competed in this section of the B.C. Centennial Bridge Tournament.

Victorian Velma Acres, teamed with J. Ribeyre of Port Alberni, tied for fourth place.

In other finals, K. A. Hilborn and H. D. Thain, both of Alberni, won the Vancouver pairs, and J. Hutchinson and J. Fall, both of Cobble Hill, won the Quesnel pairs.

'Indian' Tasty Morsel

By BILL THOMAS

Barbecueing an Indian could be described as a rare play but it's not—it's quite well done.

The play, written and directed by Patrick O'Neill, opened to an appreciative audience at the Bastion Theatre Workshop Friday and will be offered again tonight and Sunday. It will be repeated again next weekend.

The play itself is truly experimental for Mr. O'Neill has chosen to follow the pattern of theatre of the absurb with a number of modifications.

FAST PATTER

Unlike so many plays of the type this one is easy to follow and the jokes are not obscure. The writer relies on fast patter and the cast deliver their lines so that the jokes are not lost.

From my seat Ed Fordham playing Uncle Slim was the standout of the evening. He managed to find his level early and give his lines the weight they needed.

Mr. Fordham played it straight all the way from the lecherous to the ludicrous and is well worth seeing and hearing.

Dan Christian plays the Leader and after a hesitant start he settled in to a fine performance.

By the second act he was in fine form and was particularly effective on the final moments of the play.

Joan Fordham plays the Lady, a fusty old-maid with no, no, no on her lips but yes-yes in her eyes. I got the impression that if they had not barbecued Indian Glenn MacDonald she might have attacked him herself. It was a very convincing effort.

TYPICAL YOUNG

Barry Flatman and Bronwen Palfrey play a Boy and Girl who summarize the whims, fancies, facts and fallacies of young people.

They both did well especially Mr. Flatman, he has a definite flair for the ridiculous. Miss Palfrey might tone down her delivery slightly. She has a tendency to shout. She did compensate for this though by her delicate handling of some sensitive moments in this play.

EFFECTIVE GRUNTS

Mr. O'Neill does not give Glenn MacDonald and Jim Cotton much opportunity to shine. Mr. MacDonald makes an adequate Indian for the barbecue and Mr. Cotton grunts his few lines effectively as the Old Man.

The play is not tedious or depressing as is the case with so many plays tagged in this category. The lines are funny and the audience laughed — surely sufficient reason to make it worth seeing.

Bastion Theatre describes the Workshop as "A place where original works and experimental programs can be presented: a place providing opportunities for young directors, writers and students to try out ideas and talents and for experienced performers to enjoy a 'change of pace' — these are the reasons for the existence of a Studio Theatre."

On this occasion these ideals seem to be both justified and realized. The play is worth seeing for both the pure entertainment seeker and the theatre student.

Mrs. Yates and her 'babies'

Sole Miracle Survivor Will Appear with Pope

FATIMA, Portugal (LAT) — Sister Lucia, the sole survivor of the three young children who saw the famed visions of Fatima, will appear here Saturday with Pope Paul VI before an anticipated gathering of more than 1,000,000. Other millions will see the event on world-wide television via communications sattelites.

The occasion may well be unprecedented. Lucia is emerging from virtually lifelong seclusion for the event.

EMOTIONAL DISPLAY

Her exposure to the faithful pilgrims at this site of the "Miracle of Fatima," may touch off an enormous emotional display.

Lucia Dos Santos was only 10 when the apparitions of the Virgin Mary appeared to her and the other two seers 50 years ago, but it was through Lucia that the prophesis and warnings of "the beautiful lady" were passed to the world.

She remains a mysterious figure, for beyond her cloistered existence since the events, she has yet to reveal a "third secret" told her by the "lady."

MARIANISM OBSTACLE

Meanwhile, as several hundred thousdand pilgrims waited in cold, sporadic rain for Saturday's events, it became clear that commemoration of the golden anniversary of the Fatima Miracle will go down as a major triumph for conservatives with the Catholic Church.

The announcement here Friday that sister Lucia will appear under the Pope's wing, plus a papal message from the Vatican at the same time, indicated that Paul is publicly embracing the controversial veneration of Mary despite the counsel of liberals.

Marinaism is, next to the Pope himself, probably the major obstacle to the movement toward Christian unity. Neither the Protestant nor the Orthodox churches accept it. The Pope's open embrace of Marianism now will not further the spirit of ecumenicism.

"Ours can well be called the Marian era," the Pope said in Rome.

Violets Bring Out Maternal Instincts

By NANCY BROWN

Growing African violets is an addictive habit, which brings out the maternal instinct in its devotees, according to Mrs. Philippa Yates, one of the conveners of an African violet show being held in Victoria.

The show, which opened Friday, will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today, in the Douglas Room at The Bay.

* * *

"They're a challenge to grow, and once you get the secret you're hooked," Mrs. Yates said.

"You plant a leaf, and up come little plantlets — I've often heard women refer to them as their 'babies.'"

Mrs. Yates started out, as most do, with just two little plants.

* * *

"I told myself I wasn't going to be beaten by two little plants, and I finally got them to grow," she said.

"Now we grow them commercially."

"That's the way it goes — you have one, then 20, then 40, and then hundreds."

She said there's no real trick to growing the violets.

* * *

"They just need the right food and conditions, and regular care — and sometimes I smile at mine.

"Then you come across someone with three plants, neglected in a dark corner, and growing beautifully, and wonder what happened.

* * *

"It's like buying Dr. Spock, and trying to raise a baby by the rules — after a while you fit the book to the baby, and then you're fine."

Another advantage to growing the violets is that you're never friendless.

"It seems that all violet growers are good friendly people, and you start swapping plants, and 'babies,' and pretty soon you have a club."

Albert Head Test Is Private Affair

Militia and naval reserve forces of Victoria and Vancouver 200 strong will combine for an unusual training exercise in the Albert Head area today and Sunday.

The operation is limited to the units involved and not the general public.

Exercise Sea Lion will involve the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada and that unit's cadet corps; the 6th Field Squadron of the Royal Canadian Engineers from North Vancouver; ships and men from Vancouver's naval reserve division, HMCS Discovery, and Victoria's reserve unit, HMCS Malahat.

Top feature of the exercise will be an amphibious landing by the Seaforths who will be out to wreck a strategic Island radar unit.

Paddlewheeler Bids Good-bye

The Yukon Belle, the paddlewheeler that began as a drawing on a cigarette package, sailed off Thursday to Vancouver.

"There just not enough waterfront here to keep it," said Ian Andersen, vice-president of Yukon Queen Tours.

One of a pair, the Yukon Belle will ply the waters around Vancouver Harbor this summer, giving tourists the joys of riding a small but authentic paddlewheeler. The other paddlewheeler, the Yukon Queen, will remain in Victoria.

DREAM REPLICA

For Ian Andersen, the colorful little replicas are a dream come true.

Ian, who spends much time around boats, had "always wanted to ride a paddlewheeler."

In the summer of 1963, on an inspiration, he jotted down the outlines of a paddlewheeler on the handiest thing he could find — a cigarette package.

The cigarette package was shown to a friend, naval architect Doug Blake, and soon, with three more friends to help, construction commenced in a shed along the Gorge.

By now, Ernie Warner, of McKay-Cormack shipyards entered the project and, in June, 1964, the boats were christened in the Inner Harbor by Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes, with a bottle of real Yukon River water.

"They're probably the only paddlewheelers in B.C.," says Mr. Andersen.

Jubilee's Dilemma: Clogged Modernity

By JOHN MATTERS

Royal Jubilee Hospital is "on the horns of an acute bed shortage," booking elective surgery six or seven months from now.

It's laboratories are scenes of "super-modern equipment in deplorable surroundings."

And while it is keeping up with day-to-day patient care, it is desperately trying to meet the exotic requirements of modern medicine and anticipate future needs.

Candid Talk

Those were some of the observations hospital officials made Friday afternoon during a candid talk with reporters about Royal Jubilee's achievements, problems and hopes for the years ahead.

The guests were later taken on tours that illustrated in human terms just how a hospital helps sick people get better.

They were given an opportunity to measure the degree to which society has accepted the ethic that each person should be responsible for each other's good health.

Felt Tensions

The reporters saw how products of the Atomic and Space Ages have become routine components of hospital care.

They looked in on operating and recovery rooms and suddenly felt the formidable tensions and positive feelings of the doctors and nurses.

But after hearing Dr. J. A. Hutchison, Royal Jubilee's chief of medical staff, explain that elective surgery is now being booked six or seven months into the future reporters wondered: How long can old problems be tolerated in the New Medicine?

Dr. Hutchison said Jubilee has a bed occupancy rate of about 85 per cent "and I don't know of a single community in Canada operating at that rate on a day-to-day basis."

However, despite present space problems, the hospital envisions new north and west wings (there has been talk of the structures being eight or nine stories tall) and is asking its department heads for reports on what they expect during the next 10 years.

Dr. Murray Anderson, medical administrator, pointed to Royal Jubilee's psychiatric unit as an example of growth pressures the hospital has encountered.

It started with eight beds, was enlarged to 16, then to 24 and later to 43, the present size.

Dr. Kenneth Thornton, director of laboratories and chief pathologist, has about $500,000 worth of equipment in his department, half of which was purchased in the past four years.

"The fund of knowledge in pathology has doubled in the past five years," he explained. "In other sciences, it is reported to have doubled in the past 10 years."

Work Increased

The impact of fresh medical knowledge has also been felt by such departments as radiology, explained Dr. H. M. Edmison. He said new diagnostic and treatment procedures have increased his staff's work about 10 per cent in recent years.

This fall, his department hopes to acquire equipment that will make it possible to perform delicate and complicated heart investigations with more ease and accuracy than ever.

Dr. Thornton best-described the pressure to keep up with medical developments:

"I almost have to run down to get the mail. There seems to be something new every two or three minutes."

During Construction

Bed Cutback Not Drastic

Royal Jubilee Hospital has found a solution to some of the bed shortage problems which it would have faced this summer, it was announced Friday.

Architects and consulting engineers have decided that the entire south block, which contains about 60 beds, won't have to be closed down while a fifth floor is being added to the structure.

"This is a tremendous development that will help immeasurably to relieve the pressures confronting us," Michael Fraser, the hospital's assistant administrator, told a press luncheon.

* * *

Only the fourth floor with it 24 beds will have to be closed during part of the $420,000 construction program.

The second and third floors, with a total of 36 beds will remain in operation. In addition, a 17-bed unit will be opened elsewhere in the hospital.

The proposed laboratory's elaborate plumbing and electrical requirements will be installed in an abandoned dumb waiter shaft.

* * *

This means the entire wing won't be closed while contractors tear down walls and ceilings.

As a result, all previous plans to close the wing have been abandoned and nurses who earlier scheduled their holidays to coincide with the closure are being asked to change their plans.

Sailors Spilled In Squall

Three sailors from the training ship HMCS Port de la Reine Friday evening learned the hard way that the waters of Esquimalt Harbor are mighty chilly.

Lieut. Peter Kincaid and Sub.-Lts. Serge Fournier and Arthur Kuiper were sailing in a 12-foot dinghy at the entrance when a sudden squall sprung up, capsizing the dinghy and spilling the occupants into the icy water.

The crew of the nearby weatherships Quadra took in the situation and decided to get in a little boat drill.

The dripping trio was plucked from the water and brought back aboard the weatherships for hot coffee.

Meanwhile a naval tug was sent in tow in the inverted dinghy so it could sail another day.

Labor:

Oil Firms 'Bleeding' Motorists

By GEORGE INGLIS

The B.C. Federation of Labor Friday launched a scathing attack Friday on the oil companies' "bleeding" of a captive market in raising gasoline prices.

"The recent gasoline price increase of one cent a gallon has compounded the continuing felony of collusion on the part of the big oil companies," federation secretary Ray Haynes of Vancouver said.

"This collusion makes a mockery of the so-called free enterprise system whose alleged philosophy is to outbid a competitor on an open market.

ONE CENT MORE

"A young high school boy would have difficulty believing that the Imperial Oil Company made an independent decision to ask one cent more for a gallon of gasoline at the wholesale level.

"Throughout the past years Imperial has led the oil companies in asking for more and still more. After a suitable interval of a few days, the rest of the oil companies follow with identical increases.

"If that is not collusion, I defy the oil industry to tell me what that is."

'OLD PRICE'

Mr. Haynes said, "If the free enterprise system in pricing gasoline were to function—as the oil company spokesmen insist it does—Imperial's competitors would advertise the fact that their gasoline is still being sold at the old price.

"Oddly enough, that does not happen: instead Shell, British-American, Standard and other companies feel the need for an identical increase at the same time. This is more than coincidence."

Mr. Haynes cited articles in the April 18 Vancouver Sun as examples of the oil industry double standards:

TWO HEADLINES

"There an astonished public could read two headlines, one beneath the other: 'Higher Gasoline Price Urged by Pacific (Petroleum) Head' and 'Pacific Petroleum Sets Record for Profit.'

"Surely it is the height of unmitigated gall for a company to admit having made one-third more profit last year and announcing that gasoline prices must be raised because of increased costs.

"The oil companies are bleeding the B.C. motorist white. They know they have a captive market. They know the Socred government will not act on the recommendations of Judge C. W. Morrow contained in his report of the royal commission on gasoline prices."

Mr. Haynes said the 120,000-member federation will undertake a campaign to arouse public opinion and attempt to force federal and provincial government action against the oil companies.

CLC Upholds Raiding Charges

Merchant Guild 'Undeterred'

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild is getting tired of the hurry up and wait tactics of the provincial government and is unimpressed with Canadian Labor Congress charges of raiding.

"It comes as no surprise," Capt. Robert Owen of Vancouver said, Friday, when he was informed by telephone the CLC had upheld the charges laid by the B.C. Government Employees' Association.

WAGES DEMAND

"This doesn't alter our feelings toward the officers on the ships. We will continue to represent them to the best of our ability until instructed by our head office to do otherwise."

Capt. Owen said he was more interested n hearing from the provincial government on its request to have a board of reference set up to explore its wage, hours and schedule demands. He said the request was made about a month ago, and no action has been taken.

"When the officers threatened to walk out some time ago," he said, "we were told to use the proper procedure, and everything would be resolved satisfactorily.

NO ACTION

"Well, we have used the proper procedure, but we are getting no action. I don't think the membership will sit still long for this.

"If it continues for long, I am just going to have to go back to the membership and tell them they are being ignored."

Going back to the subject of the raiding charge, he said:

"We are of the opinion the Canadian Labor Congress is wrong. After all, we represented some of the same people when they worked for Black Ball. Some of them have never been represented by any other body than us."

DISALLOWED

"I happen to know that Claude Jodoin (president of the CLC) has received a letter signed by 200 officers of the B.C. Ferries, stating they do not want any part of being represented by anyone other than us."

The guild was refused certification as the bargaining agent for the ferry officers, although 200 officers are signed with the guild, and the guild has been negotating with the civil service commission and the ferry authority.

The government employees association laid the raiding charge with the CLC after the certification was turned down. The finding of the arbitration officer was against the guild and the guild appealed.

The announcement of the CLC's findings on the appeal was made by the employees' association secretary E. P. O'Connor of Vancouver, on the basis of a copy of a letter from Mr. Jodoin to the guild's national president, Robert Cook of Ottawa.

"Mr. Cook is in the Maritimes," Capt. Owen said, "and may not have received the letter."

Grace, Rainier

Monaco Royalty Join B.C. Centennial Tour

Princess Grace and Prince Rainer of the Mediterranean monarchy of Monaco will be visitors to British Columbia as part of a long list of visitors to the province during Centennial year.

The dynamic prince of the half square mile principality off the coast of France and his wife, the former movie star Grace Kelly, will bring their three children on the visit, expected in late July.

Emperor Haile Selassie started the royalty tours when he visited Victoria earlier this month.

Announcements of other visitors were made Friday morning by the B.C. Centennial committee in Victoria:

- Princess Alexandra and her husband Angus Ogilvy, who will be in Victoria May 18 and 19, will attend several public functions;
- Prime Minister Dr. H. A. C. Goppel of Bavaria, tentatively scheduled for June 12 to 15;

Thugs Smash Store Glass

Smash and grab thieves left Gonzales Pharmacy, 1845 Fairfield, in a mess Friday night when they broke in about 11:30 p.m. and threw a cash register through the store's front window.

The three grabbers left in a hurry after being spotted. They fled in a yellow 1966 car. It was not immediately known how much or what was taken.

Informal Visit

The chief of personnel of the Canadian Armed Forces, Air Marshal E. M. Reyno of Ottawa, made a short informal visit to the Canadian Services College Royal Roads on Friday.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST

May 13, 1867

We learn from Mr. Baxter, who has just come down country and who of course speaks from personal observation that the greater portion of the road between Clinton and Soda Creek is in very bad condition and stands very much in need of repairs. From Deep Creek to the 150 mile post, a distance of 26 miles, the mud is in places, axle deep.

Through the Green Timber it is full of boulders which seriously impede the progress of vehicles. The condition of the road may be imagined when we state that Mr. Parsons, of the firm of U. Nelson & Co. was obliged to leave half the freight at the 126 mile post.

Guests were Mrs. H. R. Bridger, Mrs. H. Fong, Mrs. W. Gemmell, Mrs. C. P. Jones, Mrs. L. P. Jones, Mrs. J. Robinson, Mrs. J. F. Sparks and Miss Darlaine Woodburn, who are all eligible for the preceptor degree.

The Lyall Street home of Mrs. C. B. Linworth was decorated in a Japanese theme when guests and members gathered there for cocktails.

* * *

Dessert followed in the Lampson Street home of Mrs. F. C. Breen. Both Mrs. Breen and Mrs. W. Mathewson were dressed in authentic Hawaiian muu-muus to carry out the Hawaiian theme.

On Sunday, chapter members joined with those of Xi Nu Chapter to entertain their mothers and friends at a tea in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Among the guests was Miss Louise Ward, a member-at-large of Preceptor Mu Chapter in San Francisco.

Incoming president of Preceptor Eta, Mrs. Lock, presented gifts to the Misses Doreen Waller and Kelso Reed who recently received the honorary degree, the Order of the Rose. A gift was also given to Mrs. Child, who received the Girl of the Year award.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will continue to advise girls who have had babies out of wedlock to tell their sweethearts BEFORE they marry. This is what happened to me:

I had a little boy out of wedlock and decided to keep him. I cooked up a story about a brief, unsuccessful marriage which most people believed. When I met Ron I told him I was divorced. After several months of dating he asked me to marry him. I felt like the luckiest girl in the world.

Two weeks before the wedding my mother took me aside and told me I would be doing a terrible thing if I married Ron under the cloud of a lie. I wept and insisted I couldn't take a chance on losing him. If he was unable to accept me because of my past I would just die. After hours of talking, my mother persuaded me that she was right.

I told Ron the very next night. His reply was, "I knew it. I was just waiting to hear it from you. And now there is nothing between us to mar our perfect love."

So you see Ann, once again truth paid off in a way that a lie never could. Please keep telling the girls who are in my boat that there is only one way to handle this problem. The honest way. — A HAPPY MRS. WITH A CLEAR CONSCIENCE

Dear Happy Mrs.: You told them dear, and, on behalf of all the girls whose minds you may have changed, I thank you.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: Quite some time ago my daughter-in-law suddenly stopped talking to my daughter. I tried to learn the details but nobody would talk about it.

This family rift bothered me and I decided to get to the bottom of it. Last week I wrote my daughter-in-law and asked her to tell me why she had stopped talking to my daughter. I said, "Perhaps there was a misunderstanding which I can help iron out." I was shocked at her answer. She wrote, "I have always despised your daughter and decided to stop going through the hypocritical motions of being nice to her."

This reply cut into my heart like a knife. How should I treat my son and his wife now? Should I ignore them as they have ignored my daughter? Or should I pretend that I did not receive the letter of explanation? — SORRY I ASKED

Dear Sorry: Let this be a lesson to all self-appointed menders of ruptured relationships. The golden slogan "Mind Your Own Business" should be the cardinal rule for well-intentioned "Fixers." Now, say nothing more. You've said too much already.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: I met this girl when we were counsellors at a camp last summer. We are both 14. My parents met her and they like her a lot.

She wants me to spend a weekend with her (it is a nice bus ride from here about 60 miles, but my folks won't let me go because they have never met her parents.

Does this make sense? I don't think so and I hope you'll be on my side. — MISSED Q

Dear Missed: I suggest that the girl's mother write or telephone your mother and introduce herself. This would make your folks less uneasy about allowing you to make the trip.

P.S. You are a girl aren't you? I'm assuming this although you didn't say.

Centennial Theme At Orphanage Tea

The British Columbia Protestant Orphans' Home was the setting recently for a colorful annual linen shower and donation tea. Huge arrangements of pink, red and yellow tulips and other spring flowers were in the hall and the auditorium, the work of Mrs. J. C. Scott.

* * *

In keeping with the theme of Canada's centennial, Charles Ellington, president of the men's board of trustees, explained how the orphanage has progressed since 1893, when the home was built.

The children were in the spirit of Canada's 100th birthday, too. They entered the auditorium wearing caps decorated with the Canadian flag, and they carried the centennial banner. Directed by Mrs. H. R. Smith and accompanied by Mrs. A. F. McQuarrie at the piano, they sang selections from "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Sound of Music." The guests joined in the chorus for the final number, "Can-a-da."

* * *

Even the wee tots were part of the show. The youngest children sang a number of nursery rhymes.

One of the children presented corsages of white carnations to Mrs. Smith and to Mrs. McQuarrie on behalf of the Ladies' Committee of the Home, who sponsored the tea.

Mrs. M. Harwood, president of the ladies' committee, and Mrs. A. M. Ludgate, matron of the home, greeted guests.

Presiding at the refreshment table were Mrs. L. R. Hall and Mrs. C. J. McLeod, Serviteurs were Mrs. J. W. King, Mrs. J. MacLachlan, Mrs. G. Murdoch, Mrs. F. Shandley, Mrs. A. Wisznlewski, Mrs. M. Stretch, Mrs. J. Bigmore, Mrs. D. E. Weeks and Mrs. W. R. Clark.

* * *

Taking receipts at the door, which totalled more than $200, were Mrs. A. Clack and Mrs. Scott. In charge of linen donations was Mrs. A. H. Adams.

An added feature at this year's tea was a conducted tour through the orphanage. Mrs. M. Wiseman was the guide.

Grandmother's Necklace For 'Something Old'

A necklace of amethysts, belonging to her grandmother, fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Donna-Rae Downard, when she became the bride of Robert Paul Cuthbert.

The talisman was the only jewelry accent to the bride's street-length dress of egg-shell crepe, fashioned with an over-blouse of heavy Italian lace. A satin bow accented the waistline. Her turban was of ruffled maline in deep pink tones and accessories were in bone shade. Cymbidium orchids and sweetheart roses, accented with streamers, topped the Bible she carried.

All Saints' Anglican Church was decorated with arrangements of spring flowers in pink tones when Rev. John Vickers heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Downard, 291 View Royal Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cuthbert, 4462 Wilkinson Road. Mr. Downard gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's only attendant was her aunt, Mrs. J. L. Cadwallader, who wore a two-piece suit of pale green crocheted French straw. Pale coral nylon net trimmed her cream Panama hat, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations. Her jewelry was the bride's gift of a silver bracelet.

J. Bull was best man for his brother-in-law. Ushering the guests were the brothers of the principals, Albert Cuthbert and Jay Downard, and Leo Kozak.

A reception followed in the home of the bride's parents. Pink carnations topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the lace-covered head table. The cake was surrounded with pink tulle and camellias. B. W. Parker proposed the toast to his god-daughter.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

As a defender you probably know when it pays to lead trumps. Do you, as declarer, use that knowledge to draw a "backward inference," when trumps are led against you? Cover the E-W hands.

You are in four spades. West leads a low trump and East's queen falls to your king. Both defenders follow when the spade ace is played, but the jack is still out. Your analysis at this point is that if everything goes badly you may lose a trick in each suit.

You should make up your mind that the diamond queen is wrong, for if it is not you will always make the contract. If you are going to lose a diamond, you must try to establish a long card in one of the red suits. No time to try both, for when you lose the lead a club will come back.

This is where you can draw a "backward inference" from the opening lead. A defender who leads trumps after declarer has bid two or more suits suggests that declarer's side suit is breaking badly for him. (Otherwise the trump lead would not be good tactics.) You should therefore assume that diamonds—the suit you have bid—are more likely to break badly than hearts. So you attack the hearts and make the contract.

CEDAR HILL ROAD

Light and Airy in a Staid old Tudor — Steep roof pitch and battened gables surrounded by big old oak trees give the demure setting an Olde English charm. Manicured gardens sweep from the road to the fish ponded rockeries and to the fully fenced rear yard where fruit trees and flowers adorn a secluded sanctuary. Home is a delight. Built approximately 27 years ago the home gives an age deception from without while the interior floor plan is one you might find in a new home today. The construction was most certainly done when labour and material were cheap for quality craftsmanship abounds. Main floor plan includes large family room and dining room with sundeck off large bright kitchen with lots of cabinets and bar overlooking garden. Living room-parlour with matched granite hearth, large bedroom with walk-in closets and charming 4-piece bath. "A HOME FOR THE PERFECTIONIST!"
V.L.A.

Few homes in the Victoria area could match this secluded family residence finished to challenge the most critical buyer. Just one of the many features is a sunken living room with the finest Roman tile fireplace you've seen! 3 bedrooms (one with built-in twin beds). No expense has been spared in construction as evidenced by the 10" cement basement walls — mahogany baseboards — rock walls — double garage and paved drive. Set in 1.65 acres of natural wooded beauty, complemented by a variety of shrubs, flowers and berries. I could spend all day describing this home (a paragraph to describe the bathroom planter alone) — YOU can enjoy it the rest of your life IF you act quickly! I take great pleasure in offering this home for the first time since it was built (to rigid VLA specifications) in 1959. You could not begin to duplicate this outstanding home for the asking price of $37,900. For further details phone 385-6741 or 384-8243.

Garden Notes

Mail Piling Up

By M. V. CHESNUT

Once again I'm afraid it is necessary for me to offer apologies to readers who have written to me seeking help with their garden problems and are still awaiting an answer. For some weeks now I have been deluged with questions, and these letters have been coming in faster than I have been able to cope with them, and the backlog of unanswered mail on my desk is growing higher and higher.

* * *

There is always a heavy influx of question mail in the spring of the year anyway, and the volume is particularly high this year with so many folks planting up Centennial gardens. And this is complicated by another factor — our free seed offers.

Herb Smith is having a spot of trouble with his blue spruce, say; some of the needles are turning brown and falling off. He means to write to me about this and ask what can be done to correct the trouble, but in very human fashion he keeps putting off the letter-writing chore.

Then along comes one of our free seed offers. Herb writes in for his free seeds, but before he licks the envelope shut, he remembers his ailing spruce and sticks a note in asking what he should do about it. When this little scene is repeated in six or seven hundred homes, a mountain of questions mail piles up on my desk.

I am working my way through this mass of letters as fast as humanly possible, but the going is necessarily slow, for I must do this work late at night after my bread-and-butter chores are out of the way. I can't use a stenographer — not when I have to use words like polygonum baldschuanicum or pentochloronitrobenzene — so your letters must be answered by two inexpert typing fingers.

Your questions will be answered — you can be sure of that — but I must ask you to be patient. And if my answers seem short almost to the point of curtness, I am sure you will under the reason and bear with me.

* * *

While we are on the subject of question mail, I think we might run through the ground rules once more. First, when you write to me with a garden problem, do NOT expect the answer will necessarily appear in the paper, for I don't have the space in my column to cope with more than a tiny fraction of the questions received. It IS true that I select a very few questions to discuss in print—questions of more or less general interest — but by far the greater proportion of questions received must be answered by mail.

Don't forget, too, that when you write to me for advice or help on garden or houseplant problems, you are expected to enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope; I have wasted many precious minutes trying to decipher illegible signatures and addresses.

* * *

Quite a few letters come in signed Constant Reader or Ardent Gardener, and these too must necessarily go unanswered, for without the stamped and self-addressed envelope, I have no way of replying.

I would prefer, too, that you don't ask me questions dealing with garden design. Landscape architecture is a highly specialized art form and I haven't had the training for it; moreover, such questions must usually be answered with sketches, and I can't draw pictures for sour apples.

The Spiteful World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Rumormongers Busy

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — The Burt Lancasters have been married for more than two decades, and some of their children are grown up and one is married with a child. So I don't believe that at this late stage they are planning to go their separate ways. The rumors are around that Burt, currently on location in Mexico with The Scalp Hunters, and wife Norma are separated by more than the mileage between them. I'll believe it when Burt tells me.

* * *

Robert Mitchum, having sold his farm in Maryland, has bought a big ranch in California — to give a home to his 16 quarter horses. After tossing a party at Chasen's, Robert was due to take off for Rome to star in Anzio for Dino de Laurentiis, leaving his horses behind. No room for them on the battlefront.

* * *

Anthony Quinn didn't linger long in Hollywood. He wanted to get back to the simple life. "I prefer my farm outside Rome," he told me. "We make our own wine. We can feel the good earth. I'm glad my three sons are growing up there. It's more real than this," sweeping his arm around the plush Beverly Hills restaurant. Tony had dropped 20 pounds, via the willpower route, which is now being followed by Peter Sellers, who looked gloriously slim in Casino Royale but ate to a fare-thee-well afterwards, and is now dieting for his movie in Hollywood.

* * *

While the reviews for Casino Royale were as bad in Hollywood as in New York and London, the business is even better here where you can't get into the parking lot, let alone the theatre. How does one account for this? Even the producer, Charlie Feldman, would admit that most of the reviews have been bad, as they were for his previous picture, What's New Pussycat, which also did great business.

* * *

Fred Macmurray is reading the script of A Son-in-Law for Charlie McCready and, if he likes it, this will be his eighth for the Disney people. Someone was saying to me that the old-timers of Hollywood don't know when to quit. Why should they, when their pictures still make money? And what, would they do, if they did? So, more power to Bette Davis, Joan Crawford, Barbara Stanwyck, Charles Bickford, John Wayne, et al. All of whom will work until they drop. Retirement is an unhappy word for a Hollywood star.

* * *

David Hemmings, who speaks his mind no matter what, told a British reporter, "I'm utterly selfish and totally irresponsible." This is fair warning to all the ladies who might fall in love with him.

* * *

A barber in Beverly Hills has received an offer of $25 for one lock of Rolling Stone Mick Jagger's hair. He regretfully had to refuse the money because the Stones cut their own manes, afraid that a pro might take too much and, for $25, a lock who wouldn't?

When Emperor Haile Selassie visited Julie Andrews on the Star! set, he promised to send her a lion cub, upon which she hummed Born Free, and hopes His Majesty got the point.

Russians Learn While Asleep

Hypnopaedia Works

By NINO LO BELLO
From Moscow

Russian scientists are hot on the trail of a new gimmick in education — hypnopaedia.

Hypnopaedia is now getting a thorough scientific workout at the Ukrainian Institute of Language Studies in Kiev — and so far the results are an eye-opener. Through hypnopaedia (learning while asleep), individuals are being taught foreign languages and other things.

* * *

The technique of sleep-education is undergoing controlled experimentation as several thousand Russians between the ages of 18 and 50 are lulled to sleep with an interlude of taped light music. Then the same tape-recorder, fitted with an endless cartridge device, feeds the slumbering student his subject matter over and over again.

By means of this nocturnal tape recorder which plants the study material into the person's subconscious (which never sleeps), the Soviets believe they can get anybody to master any foreign language.

* * *

During these experiments, some Russians have also learned while sound asleep, to eliminate stuttering, to stop finger-nail biting, to control over-eating, and to cut the smoking habit.

Using a bedside tape recorder with a speaker under the pillow, Russian professors have memorized entire lectures, and opera singers have learned long roles, students have absorbed difficult study materials, and actors have mastered difficult parts in Italian or German without a trace of accent.

* * *

Although pre-recorded tapes are best for learning foreign languages while asleep, especially if the words are pronounced by a native, the Soviet tests show that a person does better if he uses his own voice for the playback tape.

Moreover, the Kiev scientists have discovered that the most effective teaching period is for the first two-and-a-half hours immediately upon going to sleep and for the one-and-one-half-hour period before awakening.

* * *

"Hypnopaedia, since it is predicated on suggestion and repetition, avoids the necessity of waiting for the conscious mind to open the door for the desired information. It slips in more easily, unhindered, because the door to the subconscious is always open," explains Prof. Leonid Blinnichenko, who heads the Kiev research project.

Prof. Blinnichenko goes on to explain that during slumber, conscious barriers are down. Since it is the conscious mind that wanders off a subject with distractions, boredom or fatigue, its temporary withdrawal leaves the door to one's subconscious open to suggestions.

* * *

In a recent experiment Prof. Blinnichenko took a group of nail biters and brainwashed them with night messages that their nails tasted bitter. Setting up two groups, he exposed the first team six times a night to the anti-bite propaganda.

After 54 nights, he reports, 40 per cent of them gave up the habit, whereas every member in the second control squad kept right on biting.

Other experimental attempts resulted in one young man learning six pages of Pushkin's poetry in a single session, a writer who is mastering the Russian dictionary at the rate of three pages a night, and a railroad official who imprinted on his mind, in just 10 days, the Soviet Union's complete passenger train schedule.

* * *

In another notable experiment Prof. Georgi N. Flenov, the noted Soviet nuclear physicist, sought to learn English in 36 nights at the rate of 750 new words each time he went to bed. The experiment worked for him — but that doesn't mean every sleep learner can become an overnight success.

At Cloverdale School

Fifty Years Remembered

By NANCY BROWN

In her 70th year, Miss Gladys Ledingham was belle of the ball, Friday night.

Still teaching after 15 years in semi-retirement, she stood upright and alert, greeting pupils she had known 50 years ago, when Cloverdale school opened its one room to pupils for three divisions.

The occasion was an open house to celebrate a half century of education in the school, attended by graduates and former teachers.

School rooms were lined with old class photographs, and memories flowed freely with the tea and coffee.

"We were the best school in the district—won the interschool sports cup, and the soccer cup for years—do you remember . . ." The buzz of conversation was continuous.

Contractor George Farmer remembered when Miss Ledingham used to take him into the cloakroom and strap him.

★ ★ ★

"I didn't pay attention," he told her, "and you always used to tell me 'this hurts me more than it hurts you.'"

Harold Tyson was there, with his wife Millie—also a Cloverdale graduate, and his four children who all went to Cloverdale school.

There were at least three sets of twins in that first class of nearly 40 pupils.

★ ★ ★

Harold Tyson started in Miss Ledingham's class with his twin brother David.

There were two families of Nobles—not related, and with a set of twins a each family.

Both families were represented Friday, along with three of the six Hall girls (Hilda, Edie, Grace, Gwen, Eva and Mabel).

★ ★ ★

Mabel — now Mrs. Pollard — came from Vancouver for the reunion.

Miss Ledingham is now teaching her grandnephew.

"He's 10 years old, and nearly deaf, so I teach him in the mornings, and he goes to public school in the afternoons," she said.

Comparing education over the years, she said she has seen many improvements.

★ ★ ★

"I've kept up with teaching, and with the new ideas," she said.

"The greatest improvement I can see is in the reading," said Miss Ledingham.

"As children we learned to read words, but now they learn to read ideas.

"The new math has me about floored when it gets to junior high level," she said, "but up till then it really isn't too different from the way the best teachers actually taught all through the years.

★ ★ ★

"I've seen changes in just about every course through the years — many, many changes, but this is the first change there has been one in the arithmetic course."

School board chairman Peter Bunn attended opening ceremonies Friday night and spoke briefly, asking for support for today's school building referendum.

'Yes' for Park Vote Urged in Esquimalt

Esquimalt residents will be acting like beggars if they turn down today's referendum to make the municipality part of the district's regional parks board, according to Coun. William Bell.

"We must take our part, or we'll be like beggars — there to use them, but not paying for them," he said.

During the last referendum on the subject, Esquimalt rejected the regional board's function of the acquisition of parkland.

Participation will cost the taxpayer an estimated one-half mill.

A record number of Canada Council fellowships, worth nearly $3,000,000, were announced Friday. The money will be used to finance studies toward postgraduate degrees by 949 students.

Applications for a new television station in Port Renfrew will be heard by the Board of Broadcast Governors at a public hearing in Ottawa on June 20.

More Student Jobs, More Job Seekers

Large numbers of University of Victoria students are seeking summer jobs, the Canada Manpower Centre in Victoria reported Friday.

Manpower centre manager George Bevis said the campus office of his organization has had a 35-per-cent increase in employer-listings, with 785 names.

"But the student enrolment is also up, making it necessary to continue the search for more jobs suitable for their experience and ability," he said.

"Students, in general, are prepared to accept any reasonable form of employment. However, with so many of today's university students financing their own ducation, they are naturally interested in obtaining the best possible wage in order to meet next year's expenses.

★ ★ ★

"Nevertheless, their primary need is for a job."

Mr. Bevis said prospective employers may call the campus office at 388-6014 to register.

China's Armies Will Crush 'Sellout Peace'

● Simon Malley has just returned from Peking with the first interviews granted by top leaders of China to any foreign correspondent in two years. A veteran newspaperman who for 18 years has covered the United Nations for various African and Asian newspapers, Malley today begins an exclusive 10-part report on his conversations.

By Simon Malley
First of 10 Parts

China will send its vast armies into Vietnam the moment Hanoi is threatened with a "sellout peace," Prime Minister Chou En-lai told me in his first interview with a foreign correspondent in two years.

Chou

He sat with me in his reception room in the Forbidden City of Peking and declared that Hanoi has only to say the word to bring an avalanche of Chinese "volunteers" to its aid.

Ultimately, he predicted, the course of events will result in just that.

In my two-and-one-half hours with the Chinese prime minister and in subsequent interviews with four other top leaders close to Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, I received the fullest and most detailed picture of China's plans since the beginning of the hectic "cultural revolution."

They talked with surprising candor about China's relations with Russia, her role opposing Vietnam peace bids in

Malley

January, her inner political turmoil, and other issues vital to world peace.

They even gave me their private prediction on the 1968 presidential elections in the United States.

As a correspondent for the French-language African weekly magazine Jeune Afrique, I had been able to interview Chou En-lai when he made his last visit to North Africa three years ago.

Early this year I inquired through my many friends in Africa and Asia about the possibility of getting a visa to enter China.

They told me that the Chinese had agreed "in principle" to my visit, despite the fact that no visas had been issued

Pearson Sets Monday Meet On War Fear

OTTAWA (CP)—Upset by U Thant's fear that the Vietnam conflict may be the opening stages of a new world war, MPs kept pressure on the government Friday for a formal resolution expressing the Canadian Parliament's views.

Prime Minister Pearson successfully side-stepped any immediate commitment on such a step early in the day but was later urged to meet leaders of all the political parties next Monday to pave the way for parliamentary action.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker put forward the idea of a formal resolution, noting as the Commons met that the United Nations secretary-general had suggested the world is "slithering into World War Three" and that United States bombing of North Vietnam should stop.

SALTED AWAY

Mr. Pearson salted the issue away temporarily by suggesting that MPs can speak their piece during the current throne speech debate.

However, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) revived it by urging Mr. Pearson to invite Mr. Diefenbaker and leaders of the other parties to a meeting Monday to frame a formal resolution to be placed before Parliament.

Parliament, he said, should be enabled to "speak to the world about the fragic international situation facing us." A formal resolution would be far more effective than any number of speeches by MPs. Thant's statements couldn't be brushed aside or regarded as an academic exercise.

NO RESPONSE

There was no immediate government response. Earlier, Mr. Pearson said he does not think anyone can predict what may happen in Vietnam if the war continues.

As the throne speech debate wound up its third day, a third motion amounting to non-confi-

War Talk Hit

'Thant Using Scare'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Congressman Cornelius Gallagher (D — New Jersey) charged Friday that United Nations Secretary-General Thant was using "scare tactics" in his efforts to end the war in Vietnam.

* * *

Speaking to a Canadian news conference, the outspoken congressman said Thant was "lending credence to the myth" that Washington would halt the bombing without a similar de-escalation by Hanoi.

* * *

Gallagher said Thant "could better serve the ends of peace" by going to North Vietnam and convincing Hanoi "of our hope that we can find a solution to the conflict."

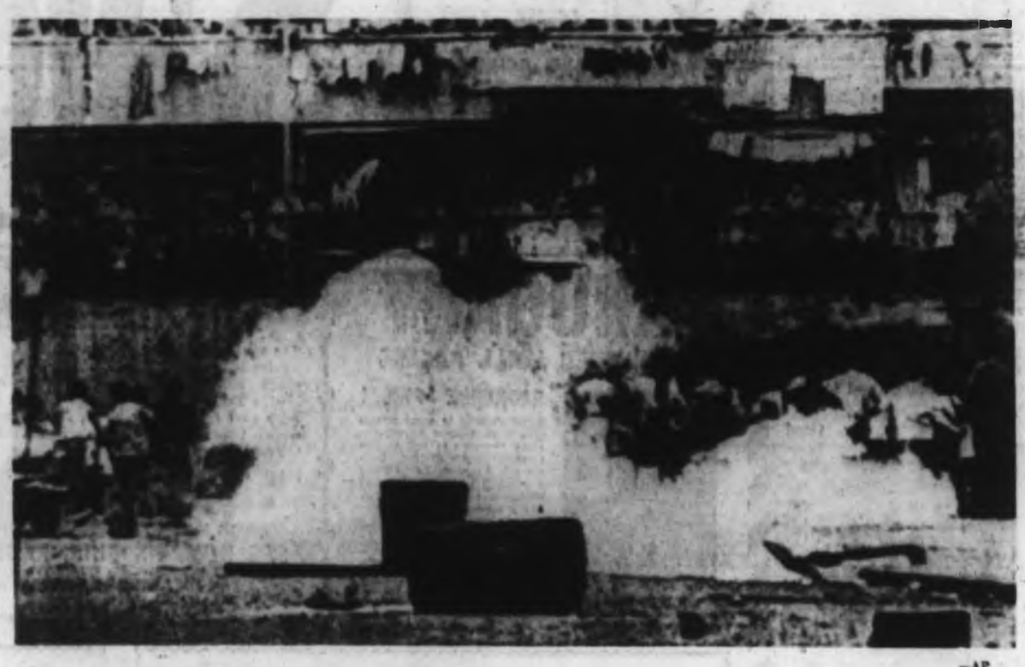

* * *

He added that the United States realized that a continuation of the conflict "takes us down a dangerous path." But he said a permanent stop to the bombing would not lessen this danger.

Riots Go On, Demands Listed

CHINA PRESSES HONG KONG

Police tear gas shell explodes amid crowd in riot-torn Kowloon section of Hong Kong

Police Showered By Rocks, Bottles

HONG KONG (UPI) — Screaming Chinese youths showered police today with stones and bottles in the third straight day of Red Guard-type rioting in Hong Kong. China protested alleged police suppression in the British crown colony and presented a list of demands.

Gangs of youths poured from housing projects in the Kowloon Chinese district and attacked police. They hurled bottles, bricks and other objects from windows and alleys.

First from Peking

The Chinese protest was the first, official and direct involvement of Peking in the Hong Kong turmoil. It was made by officials of Peking's official New China News Agency.

Today's rioting flared when a company of police moved into an area near a plastic flower factory, the scene of leftist-inspired labor agitation and violence. It was at the factory that full-scale rioting erupted Thursday. (See also Page 2)

As youths attacked the police, reinforcements quickly arrived. One company of riot police and three companies of marine police were brought in to help control the rioting. But they could not prevent the youths from setting several fires and attacking buses.

Thousands of leftist Chinese youths, quoting party chairman Mao Tse-Tung's "Thoughts," rioted Friday in Kowloon, hurling Molotov cocktails, looting shops and igniting trucks and cars.

The NCNA is an official agency of the Chinese government in Peking, directly under the control of the state council (cabinet), headed by Premier Chou En-lai. The agency maintains a sizeable bureau in Hong Kong.

In its protest letter to the

1,000,000 Await Pope Paul

FATIMA, Portugal (UPI)— Pope Paul VI left Rome at dawn Saturday and flew to this Portuguese shrine to the Virgin Mary to pray for peace in Vietnam. He was to meet the only survivor of the three children who declared they saw the Virgin Mary in what the Catholic church officially holds to be a miracle.

More than 1,000,000 faithful waited through a cold, rainy night to greet the Pope.

Doctor Gives Her Four Months

Fleeing Girl May Die

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. John Price said Friday that missing Miriam Ymllyniemi, 15-year-old Jehovah's Witness, may have only two to four weeks to live without hospital treatment.

Miriam has been missing since Tuesday night when she fled hospital fearing another blood transfusion, which is against her religious credo.

Dr. Price said he based his opinion on medical evidence given at a family court hearing earlier Friday which awarded custody of Miriam to the British Columbia Children's Aid Society.

Judge Earl Vance was ruling on an application by Dorothy Lois Myllyniemi, Miriam's mother, for the custody of her child. Mrs. Myllyniemi, also a Jehovah's Witness, does not want her daughter to receive blood transfusions.

Miriam was taken into the society's custody in January for treatment of a kidney ailment known as uremia, which can be fatal if not treated.

Dr. Price was acknowledged by Judge Vance as the most important witness before the court.

Stanley Pinkerton, Children's Aid executive director, issued a public appeal for assistance in locating Miriam after consulting with her physician, Dr. Thomas Davis.

He said he also contacted Laurier Saumur, supervisor of the B.C. Jehovah movement in Victoria and "I got absolutely no co-operation — the girl and

Coyne Survives Stormy Session

WINNIPEG (CP) — The future of the newly-chartered Bank of Western Canada was left uncertain after a stormy directors' meeting Friday during which majority shareholder Marc Bienvenu sought unsuccessfully to have President James E. Coyne sever all connections with the bank.

His motion lost on a 7 to 7 deadlock, with Mr. Coyne casting a vote in favor of himself. Four directors were absent.

Mr. Bienvenu left the meeting before it ended, telling reporters he was returning to Montreal.

Mr. Coyne told a press conference after the meeting the Montreal financier had given a clear indication at one stage he intended to dissolve the bank, which has yet to open its doors for business.

Mr. Bienvenu, however, would make no commitment to reporters other than that he had told the directors "I am not going to come back here for meetings every week . . . and have clashes all the time."

'Little Monks' Eased Anguish

WASHINGTON (LAT) — There was a warm Tuesday evening last June when President Johnson sat alone in the White House anguished over the possibility that history would record him as the man who started the Third World War.

* * *

Half a world away, under his orders, American airplanes were making their first strike at the oil dumps in the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong. The raid was fraught with great danger.

Suppose, for example, the bomb load from one of those planes went astray and hit a Soviet freighter in the harbor. An error like that, the president felt, could conceivably bring the two great nuclear super-powers to an exchange of blows.

The president's agitation was apparent to his daughter, Luci, when she and her fiance, Patrick Nugent, returned to the White House from a date.

* * *

The soon-to-be-married daughter asked her father what the trouble was. He explained that at that very moment, in the mid-morning hours in Vietnam, the attack planes were in the air.

And then, as the story was disclosed Friday, he said to Luci:

"Your daddy may go down in history as having started World War III."

* * *

Luci suggested to her father that perhaps prayers to God would help. In fact, she made the specific suggestion that they all go immediately to "my little monks," as the president has since related to friends and associates.

Pat placed a call to the priory of St. Dominic's Church, asking that the church be kept open for a visit sometime between 10:30 p.m. and midnight.

One of the Dominican brothers who maintain the buildings opened the church and at 10:30, Mr. Johnson, Lady Bird, Luci and Pat, accompanied by a carload of secret servicemen, came to the church.

* * *

They prayed under a grand sculptured Pieta hanging from the ceiling before the main altar. For half an hour, the four were on their knees praying and then they left.

Back in the White House it was a long night for the president as he waited the report, but nothing untoward happened.

The president was related to friends, associates and visitors of times during the past year how he told Luci that the raid had been a success, that there had been no mishaps.

* * *

Until a White House reception Thursday night, when the story was again told, it had not been publicly disclosed.

The president was relieved that morning after the night of prayer and he told Luci so.

"You see," she answered, according to one version, "that's what my little monks can do for you."

John Masefield Dead at 88

He Asked for 'Tall Ship' And Star to Steer Her by

ABINGDON, England (AP)—John Masefield, Britain's poet laureate whose verses sang of the lonely sea and tall ships, died Friday at 88.

He was 22nd in a line of official rhymers to the Crown that included Chaucer, Ben Jonson, Wordsworth, Scott and Tennyson. But he wore his honor lightly.

"The office of poet laureate is responsible for much of the world's worst literature," he once said. "Were it not for laureates, the anthologists of bad verse would be hard-put to fill their volumes."

Masefield considered himself mainly a storyteller and he cast his poems in simple rhymes and rhythms that had little to do with the complexities of modern poetry.

Some younger poets mocked his work as old-fashioned but generations read and memorized Sea Fever, perhaps his most notable poem.

"It began: "I must go down to the sea again, to the lonely sea and the sky

And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by."

In recent years, Masefield suffered from a weak heart and seldom left his country home near Abingdon. It was here that his condition worsened Friday morning.

Masefield was born in 1878, the son of a country lawyer in Shropshire. Orphaned, he went to sea as a cook when he was 14.

Years later he wrote: "No man can fail to feel for a ship as for a living thing. She is a living thing, almost a divine thing, who demands and receives service."

But Masefield wanted to see America and he went ashore in New York. For three years he lived as a hobo, working his way to the Pacific Coast and back as a farm hand.

In New York again, he worked as a saloon porter and in a carpet factory, educating himself by reading voraciously in his spare time. He said of his job in the saloon: "What I really did was to wash out cuspidors, sweep and scrub the floor, polish the footrails, wash glasses and pacify any warring factions."

Masefield returned to England in 1897, joined a newspaper and began to write poems and stories. His Salt Water Ballads came out five years later.

PROLIFIC WRITER

Over the years, he wrote 12 plays, 13 novels, 30 volumes of verse and numerous short stories and essays.

Critics acclaimed him and in 1930 King George V named him poet laureate. Many thought the title should have gone to Rudyard Kipling.

Masefield's duty as laureate was to produce formal verse on royal birthdays and state occasions. He said such odes lay largely outside his talents.

RECENT WRITING

His recent writing was scant. It included poems for Queen Elizabeth's marriage in 1947 when she was a princess, a tribute to Sir Winston Churchill in 1954; a poem to the Queen for her tour of Nigeria in 1956 and a sonnet for Princess Margaret's wedding in 1960.

Masefield was a teetotaler and he took in cash the traditional laureate's stipend of 130 gallons of wine a year. His annual royal salary totalled about $280.

In Garrison Affidavit

Oswald, Ruby Linked

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—District Attorney Jim Garrison said Friday Jack Ruby's unlisted private telephone number was found in code in Lee Harvey Oswald's notebook.

Garrison said the code used by Oswald has been broken.

OSWALD KILLER

The Warren commission in its report on the assassination of President Kennedy said there was no indication of any link between Oswald and Ruby. Oswald was identified in the report as the assassin.

Ruby shot and killed Oswald two days after Kennedy was killed Nov. 22, 1963.

The district attorney's assertion came in a document prepared for filing in Criminal District Court. The document was drawn up in answer to motions filed by lawyers for Clay L. Shaw, retired New Orleans executive charged with conspiring to kill Kennedy.

Garrison has charged that Oswald, Shaw and the late David W. Ferrie conspired in September, 1963, to kill Kennedy in Dallas. Shaw has denied the charge. Ferrie died Feb. 22 last.

Oswald's notebook, from which Garrison said the code was broken, was published in full in the Warren report.

Oswald used a code in his notebook "quite systematically, apparently for the purpose of concealing phone numbers he regarded as sensitive," Garrison said.

Victim Believed Alive When Left on Rails

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Sheriff's detectives said a supermarket clerk was apparently robbed, slugged and then laid unconscious across a railroad track early Friday in Pico Rivera. His mangled body was discovered later by a train crew.

Pablo Luna, 27, of Huntington Beach, was last seen by his landlady Thursday, his day off. Detectives were seeking to learn how he got to Pico Rivera.

Union Pacific trainmen on a switch engine found the body Friday morning. The last train to pass previously was a freight which went through the intersection shortly after midnight.

Luna's wallet was rifled and his car missing. Members of his family knew of no reason for his being in Pico Rivera. He was to have been promoted from clerk to manager of a market in the Alhambra chain on Monday, officers learned.

Parole Asked for Truscott

OTTAWA (Special) — New Democrat Stanley Knowles Friday night asked Parliament to do what the government has refused to do — parole Steven Truscott.

Mr. Knowles introduced a private members' bill called "An act for the parole of Steven Murray Truscott" that would give the problem to MPs for solution.

Parliament, as the highest court in the land, should be allowed to decide the issue, Mr. Knowles said.

The Supreme Court last week upheld the conviction of Truscott, now 22, for the rape-slaying of 12-year-old Lynne Harper at an RCAF base near Clinton, Ont., eight years ago.

The government has refused to intervene to parole Truscott, who continues to serve a life sentence in Collins Bay Penitentiary, with no hope of parole for at least two years.

The Knowles bill depends on government goodwill if it is to be debated in the Commons at all.

'TALKED OUT'

These bills are usually "talked out" and hardly ever brought to a vote.

In explaining his bill, Mr. Knowles said it makes no comment, directly or indirectly, on the verdict of the courts regarding Truscott's guilt or innocence.

"The courts have spoken," he said, "and Parliament is not being asked by this bill to set aside or alter the decisions of the courts."

HAS RIGHT

However, he added, Parliament does have the right to legislate with respect to the granting of parole.

"The purpose of this bill is to enable Parliament to express its will that Steven Truscott should now be granted parole from his imprisonment.

"The granting of this parole would not prejudice his right to continue to seek a new trial or to pursue any other legal course available to him."

Trudeau Eyes Indemnity Bid

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Trudeau says he is preparing a response to those who have suggested some system of payment to the victims of criminal acts. A difficulty in any such scheme was that under the constitution such payments might have to come from the provinces rather than the federal government.

Lost in Huge Cave

Giant Shovel Digs For Missing Boys

HANNIBAL, Mo. (UPI) — While a giant mechanical hoe chopped into sinkholes in a new highway roadbed, rescue crews searched in a huge cave beneath the roadbed Friday night for three boys missing in Mark Twain country.

The earth-moving machine was thrown into use after a 48-hour search of mammoth, meandering Murphy Cave was abandoned. Plans to gouge into a bluff for an uncharted cavern in which the youths might be trapped also were abandoned.

LONG WAYS

Search authorities conferred, and were told that a cave found beneath the roadbed of a new highway did not extend only 100 feet as was first thought, but had tunnels stretching 1,000 feet from a sinkhole.

William Karras, chief of the searchers, said gray stone was found throughout the underground cave, which had ceilings 30 to 70 feet high. He said this stone was being used for fill in the construction of the roadbed, and this indicated there were numerous fissures in the ground.

THE BOYS

The boys—Joe Hoag, 13; his brother, Bill, 11; and their pal, Edward Dowell, 14—may have gone exploring in any of these fissures and could have been accidentally buried by construction equipment dumping fill, it was theorized.

A 150-man National Guard outfit was released by Missouri Gov. Warren Hearnes after its members tramped the cave-pocked hills day long in an unsuccessful search for the boys.

The boys had been missing since Wednesday afternoon, when they hurried home from school, changed clothes and set out on what their parents believed was a cave-exploring expedition.

Mafia Charges 'Big Headache'

MONTREAL (CP) — William Obront, mentioned by former justice minister Claude Wagner in the legislature when he spoke of "undesirables" doing business with Expo, says he would be a lot happier if he never heard of the world's fair.

Obront, who also is known as Butch Obie, said Thursday he is willing to sell his meat plant on the site—at cost.

"Not because of these charges by Wagner, which are false, the falsest I ever hear," he said, "but because it's nothing but a blasted headache."

EXPO BUSINESS

Mr. Wagner, Liberal member for Verdun, said Wednesday Obront and three other organizations do business at Expo, adding that "undesirables have succeeded in protitting from Expo facilities."

Speaking in the legislature a week ago, Mr. Wagner described Obront as a "notorious member of the Mafia."

Challenging Mr. Wagner to step out of the immunity of the legislature to repeat his charges, Mr Obront said:

LONG HOURS

"Look, I work here—in his Atwater market shop—from six in the morning till 11 at night. If that's what you've got to do to be in the Mafia, I quit.

"I own this business myself with my wife and my children. I trust for nobody.

"Sure, I know a lot of people, I'm not the type of guy to stay home and twiddle my thumbs . . . but knowing people and being partners with them is a heck of a lot different."

Quamichan Lake

Canoes to Race 'Destroyer'

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Whether or not the Cowichan Indians will join the Royal Canadian Navy may depend on the outcome of Sunday's one-mile dash of 11-man canoes at Quamichan Lake.

The canoe races are only one of many events during the 78th annual Cowichan Indian Corpus Christi Sports Day which will mark Canada's centenary.

Cowichan Indian Band secretary Louise Underwood, who also serves on four special committees during the festival said "the destroyer escort HMCS Saskatchewan crew has accepted the challenge by the Indians for the one-mile dash at 2 p.m. Sunday at Quamichan Lake.

* * *

"If the RCN fellows win the race, then maybe the Indians should join the navy to find out their technique."

The sports festival will mark the biggest gathering of Indian tribes the Cowichan Valley has seen for many years.

A parade through Duncan from Cliffs Road to the Somenos Reserve Park via Government Street and Canada Avenue will start at 10 a.m. today.

Chief Dan George, his band and the Indian dancing group from Sucker Creek, Alta., will join the parade.

The same group and other visiting Indians from Warm Springs, Ore., Nootka, Ahousat, Lummi, the Chicken Dancers from Alberta and Cowichan Indian dancers will compete Saturday and Sunday at the Somenos Long House.

It will be open to the public.

* * *

The Saturday program also includes field sports and judging of Miss Cowichan and princesses at Somenos Reserve Park, 1 p.m.; Soccer Exhibition, 6 p.m.; modern dance and crowning of Miss Cowichan, Armories, 9 p.m.

The Sunday program: Mass and Corpus Christi procession at St. Ann's Church, 10 a.m.; water sports and canoe races, Quamichan Lake, 2 p.m.

Competing canoe crews will come from various parts of Vancouver Island, the mainland and the States.

The two top races will be the Vancouver Island championship and the B.C. championship.

A total of eight Indian girls have entered the Miss Cowichan contest.

Last year's winners of the contest were Emily Charlie, queen and Mary Ann Williams, princess.

Chairman of the Cowichan Indian Sports Committee Abel Joe said, "100 years of increasing plenty, 100 years of living, playing and working together toward the common goal, the common good.

* * *

"It is a great joy to us members of the Cowichan Indian Band to greet so many people from so many walks of life."

Boundary 'Battle' At Duncan

DUNCAN—Sentiments against a proposed boundary extension by the city of Duncan are running high. The verbal conflict between the city and opponents in the unorganized area is nearing a climax.

The unorganized area includes about 1,800 people in Eagle Heights, Koksilah, Bench Road district and part of Cowichan Bay.

Mayor Jack Dobson said his office is receiving both support and opposition to the proposed extension.

Residents of the unorganized area south of Duncan will be invited to join a committee at a special meeting to study the city's proposal to extend its boundaries.

"Through the joint committee we hope to get down to a sensible discussion of the issues involved and try to clear the air as to exactly what boundary extension means.

"The city of Duncan does not want to make this a one-sided effort," said Mayor Dobson.

Tax Exemption Privilege

In reply to some queries, he stated "Farmers are worried that their land would be taxed in the same way as other city land, but farm land would come under the same tax exemption privileges as it has now in unorganized territory."

The mayor stressed that whether it is desired or not, residential areas will grow and industry will move in.

"Without planning this could result in a chaotic collection of homes and industry, side by side."

If joined with the city the proposed area would have proper planning and orderly development, he said.

Meanwhile, a petition with 283 signatures of people in the unorganized area south of Duncan opposing a merger with the city has been sent to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

'Won't Get a Vote'

The petition was organized by the Koksilah Valley Ratepayers' Association.

George Bonner of Cobble Hill, a member, said "I live outside the area and people like myself won't get a vote whether or not this boundary extension should proceed. But we would lose the assessment value of the northern end of the unorganized district.

"If people here had been asked to be taken into the city area the situation would be different.

"This thing is so wrong I am sure the government will try to put it right.

"The Municipal Act was not meant to be manipulated in this manner.

"People have not called for this extension.

"It was just dreamed up by the city of Duncan."

Suggested boundaries for a municipality are those of the Koksilah Hospital District.

This would encompass territory from Duncan boundaries, in the north, to the Malahat in the south.

Alberni Council

Budget Up $100,000

ALBERNI — Residents of this city face a five mill tax increase, bringing this year's rate to 54 mills.

The budgetw as brought in by finance chairman Charles Blair at a special meeting of council.

Increased school costs and the regional district assesament for interim hospital financing, amounted to 5.97 mills, Ald. Blair said.

ABSORBED

But the 5.97 mills will be absorbed by cutting the general revenue section of the budget.

Ald. Blair broke this down, school costs 28.34, general purpose 26.75, debt repayment 0.91. Total budget amount $678,600, an increase of almost $100,000 from last year.

He said school costs were relatively low, compared to other areas, but the increased cost of labor and supplies have accounted for a considerable portion of the increase.

SEPARATE SOON

Because 1967 is the last year Alberni will be a separate city, council was anxious to get completion of various projects, such as sidewalks, drainage system.

Ald. Blair said $50,000 had been allocated for storm drain installation, which the council felt should be completed before amalgamation with Port Alberni.

As a result of major street and sidewalk improvements in some residential areas, council anticipated a large number of local improvement bylaws, and renewing water mains to avoid having to do this work after the street have been repaired.

Ald. Blair pointed out substantial savings could be made by prepayment of sewer and water rates.

While Port Alberni increased its assessment by a flat five per cent, Alberni assessments have not been increased.

The Jaycees, the Cowichan Airport Society and the Duncan Flying Club will hold the official opening of the Duncan Airport on June 25.

A spokesman for the Jaycees said Claude Butler, who made construction of the airfield possible, will be presented with honorary membership in the society.

Planes and their pilots from throughout the Pacific Northwest are expected to participate.

Qualicum Beach

Aircraft Require Extended Runway

QUALICUM BEACH — B.C. Airlines has bought a nine-seater Beach Queen aircraft which it intends to use on the regular route to Tofino and Bella Coola.

The company has advised council here that a stop at Qualicum Beach would be of service to the community.

However the 2,000-foot runway would have to be extended to 2,500 feet, the airline said.

Council is at present considering costs and the feasibility of extending the strip.

Sea Cadets Taste Navy Life

DUNCAN — The destroyer-escort HMCS Saskatchewan, with a group of Nanaimo sea cadets aboard, left Maple Bay Friday as part of the centennial B.C. waters cruise by RCN vessels.

The 2,900-ton ship, which can be rigged to withstand nuclear fallout, also took a group of local sea cadets on a cruise of Cowichan waters.

Several hundred school children and adults inspected the ship during a two-day visit.

Housing Gripes Sting Hammer

PORT ALBERNI — The cry of "the city can find money to develop high-priced subdivisions but cannot find money for low-cost housing" is irking Mayor Les Hammer.

* * *

So he's asked the public works committee chairman, Ald. Garnet Reynolds to explain publicly once again how the city's modern new subdivision on the east side has been developed.

"New areas are opened up through the land sales trust account — a portion of the city's treasury accrued through land development.

"Land sales trust funds cannot be used for anything else, except in rare instances, and then only with the special permission of the Municipal Affairs Department.

* * *

"There is no profit made by the city, and no burden laid on the taxpayer by the development of a new subdivision such as Redford Park," Mr. Reynolds declared.

Beach Plea Halts Concrete

Although she was described as "misguided" at a meeting of city council Thursday, the campaign of Colonist writer Eileen Learoyd to keep the Dallas Road beach concrete-free has been at least partially successful.

When a Capital Improvement District Commission plan to build a cement walk and wall along the beach from Cook Street to Clover Point was recently unveiled, Mrs. Learoyd wrote a series of articles against the project and asked for public support.

The response was beyond her wildest dreams, she said in a letter to the mayor which was read at Thursday's council meeting. A total of 580 dissidents wrote in by Thursday night. (See also Page 25).

* * *

Mayor Hugh Stephen said he had had a call from the chairman of the CIDC, deputy minister of municipal affairs J. Everett Brown, and the project, which was to be financed by the provincial body, was called off for the moment until a further sampling of public opinion could be taken.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, who pointed out that the work was necessary to prevent erosion of the steep Dallas Road bank, said the program was designed to do the very thing the writers-in wanted: save the seashore.

* * *

He deplored the fact that an appeal could be made to public opinion and such a response could get out of hand and possibly thwart a necessary technical improvement.

Close Races Expected

Competition is expected to run high between Thunderbird yacht squadrons from the mainland and Victoria this weekend.

Also in competition will be teams from the Cal-20 squadrons from Victoria and Vancouver.

Competitors are hoping to run off three races Saturday and two races Sunday.

Settlement Near At Macdonald's

VANCOUVER — A basis for settlement was reached Thursday night in a wage dispute between Macdonald's Consolidated Ltd. and 200 of its employees. Negotiators for the company, the supply arm of Canada Safeway Ltd., and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union said the settlement formula averted what could have been a serious strike.

China's Armies Will Crush 'Sellout Peace'

● Simon Malley has just returned from Peking with the first interviews granted by top leaders of China to any foreign correspondent in two years. A veteran newspaperman who for 18 years has covered the United Nations for various African and Asian newspapers, Malley today begins an exclusive 10-part report on his conversations.

By Simon Malley
First of 10 Parts

China will send its vast armies into Vietnam the moment Hanoi is threatened with a "sellout peace," Prime Minister Chou En-lai told me in his first interview with a foreign correspondent in two years.

Chou

He sat with me in his reception room in the Forbidden City of Peking and declared that Hanoi has only to say the word to bring an avalanche of Chinese "volunteers" to its aid.

Ultimately, he predicted, the course of events will result in just that.

In my two-and-one-half hours with the Chinese prime minister and in subsequent interviews with four other top leaders close to Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, I received the fullest and most detailed picture of China's plans since the beginning of the hectic "cultural revolution."

They talked with surprising candor about China's relations with Russia, her role opposing Vietnam peace bids in

Malley

January, her inner political turmoil, and other issues vital to world peace.

They even gave me their private prediction on the 1968 presidential elections in the United States.

As a correspondent for the French-language African weekly magazine Jeune Afrique, I had been able to interview Chou En-lai when he made his last visit to North Africa three years ago.

Early this year I inquired through my many friends in Africa and Asia about the possibility of getting a visa to enter China.

They told me that the Chinese had agreed "in principle" to my visit, despite the fact that no visas had been issued

Pearson Sets Monday Meet On War Fear

OTTAWA (CP)—Upset by U Thant's fear that the Vietnam conflict may be the opening stages of a new world war, MPs kept pressure on the government Friday for a formal resolution expressing the Canadian Parliament's views.

Prime Minister Pearson successfully side-stepped any immediate commitment on such a step early in the day but was later urged to meet leaders of all the political parties next Monday to pave the way for parliamentary action.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker put forward the idea of a formal resolution, noting as the Commons met that the United Nations secretary-general had suggested the world is "slithering into World War Three" and that United States bombing of North Vietnam should stop.

SALTED AWAY

Mr. Pearson salted the issue away temporarily by suggesting that MPs can speak their piece during the current throne speech debate.

However, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) revived it by urging Mr. Pearson to invite Mr. Diefenbaker and leaders of the other parties to a meeting Monday to frame a formal resolution to be placed before Parliament.

Parliament, he said, should be enabled to "speak to the world about the tragic international situation facing us." A formal resolution would be far more effective than any number of speeches by MPs. Thant's statements couldn't be brushed aside or regarded as an academic exercise.

NO RESPONSE

There was no immediate government response. Earlier, Mr. Pearson said he does not think anyone can predict what may happen in Vietnam if the war continues.

As the throne speech debate wound up its third day, a third motion amounting to non-confi-

War Talk Hit

'Thant Using Scare'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Congressman Cornelius Gallagher (D — New Jersey) charged Friday that United Nations Secretary-General Thant was using "scare tactics" in his efforts to end the war in Vietnam.

★ ★ ★

Speaking to a Canadian news conference, the outspoken congressman said Thant was "lending credence to the myth" that Washington would halt the bombing without a similar de-escalation by Hanoi.

★ ★ ★

Gallagher said Thant "could better serve the ends of peace" by going to North Vietnam and convincing Hanoi "of our hope that we can find a solution to the conflict."

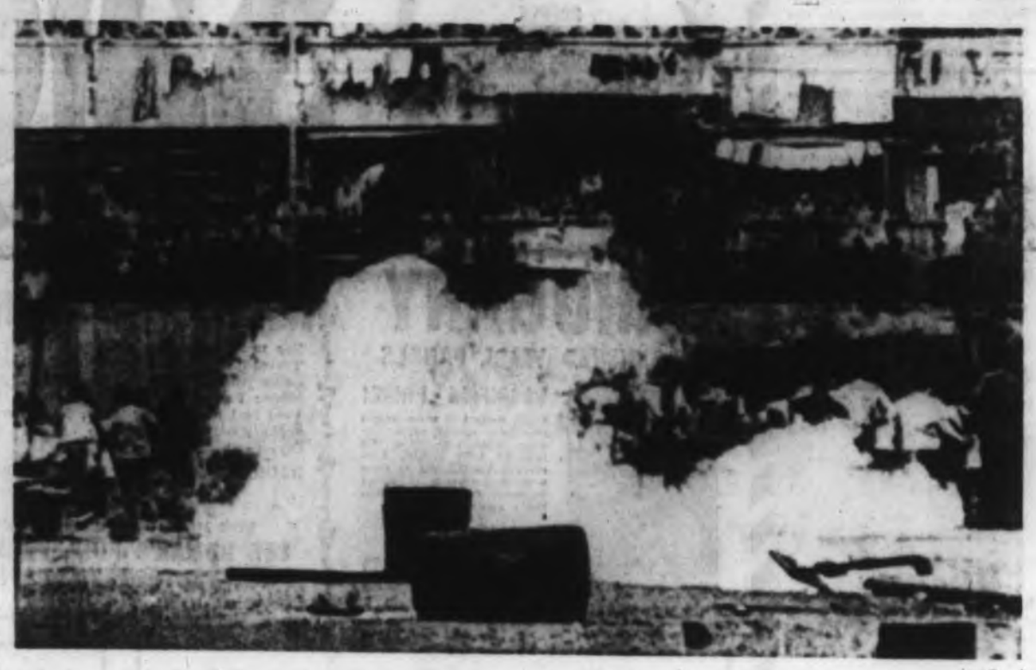

★ ★ ★

He added that the United States realized that a continuation of the conflict "takes us down a dangerous path." But he said a permanent stop to the bombing would not lessen this danger.

REDS LIST RIOT DEMANDS

—AP

Police tear gas shell explodes amid crowd in riot-torn Kowloon section of Hong Kong

Police Showered By Rocks, Bottles

HONG KONG (UPI) — Screaming Chinese youths showered police today with stones and bottles in the third straight day of Red Guard-type rioting in Hong Kong. China protested alleged police suppression in the British crown colony and presented a list of demands.

Gangs of youths poured from housing projects in the Kowloon Chinese district and attacked police. They hurled bottles, bricks and other objects from windows and alleys.

First from Peking

The Chinese protest was the first, official and direct involvement of Peking in the Hong Kong turmoil. It was made by officials of Peking's official New China News Agency.

Today's rioting flared when a company of police moved into an area near a plastic flower factory, the scene of leftist-inspired labor agitation and violence. It was at the factory that full-scale rioting erupted Thursday. (See also Page 2)

As youths attacked the police, reinforcements quickly arrived. One company of riot police and three companies of marine police were brought in to help control the rioting. But they could not prevent the youths from setting several fires and attacking buses.

Thousands of leftist Chinese youths, quoting party chairman Mao Tse-Tung's "Thoughts," rioted Friday in Kowloon, hurling Molotov cocktails, looting shops and igniting trucks and cars.

The NCNA is an official agency of the Chinese government in Peking, directly under the control of the state council (cabinet), headed by Premier Chou En-lai. The agency maintains a sizeable bureau in Hong Kong.

In its protest letter to the

1,000,000 Await Pope Paul

FATIMA, Portugal (UPI)—Pope Paul VI left Rome at dawn Saturday and flew to this Portuguese shrine to the Virgin Mary to pray for peace in Vietnam. He was to meet the only survivor of the three children who declared they saw the Virgin Mary in what the Catholic church officially holds to be a miracle.

More than 1,000,000 faithful waited through a cold, rainy night to greet the Pope.

Doctor Gives Her Four Weeks

Fleeing Girl May Die

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. John Price said Friday that missing Miriam Ymllyniemi, 15-year-old Jehovah's Witness, may have only two to four weeks to live without hospital treatment.

Miriam has been missing since Tuesday night when she fled hospital fearing another blood transfusion, which is against her religious credo.

Dr. Price said he based his opinion on medical evidence given at a family court hearing earlier Friday which awarded custody of Miriam to the British Columbia Children's Aid Society.

Judge Earl Vance was ruling on an application by Dorothy Lois Myllyniemi, Miriam's mother, for the custody of her child. Mrs. Myllyniemi, also a Jehovah's Witness, does not want her daughter to receive blood transfusions.

Miriam was taken into the society's custody in January for treatment of a kidney ailment known as uremia, which can be fatal if not treated.

Dr. Price was acknowledged by Judge Vance as the most important witness before the court.

Stanley Pinkerton, Children's Aid executive director, issued a public appeal for assistance in locating Miriam after consulting with her physician, Dr. Thomas Davis.

He said he also contacted Laurier Saumur, supervisor of the B.C. Jehovah movement in Victoria and "I got absolutely no co-operation — the girl and

Coyne Survives Stormy Session

WINNIPEG (CP) — The future of the newly-chartered Bank of Western Canada was left uncertain after a stormy directors' meeting Friday during which majority shareholder Marc Bienvenu sought unsuccessfully to have President James E. Coyne sever all connections with the bank.

His motion lost on a 7 to 7 deadlock, with Mr. Coyne casting a vote in favor of himself. Four directors were absent.

Mr. Bienvenu left the meeting before it ended, telling reporters he was returning to Montreal.

Mr. Coyne told a press conference after the meeting the Montreal financier had given a clear indication at one stage he intended to dissolve the bank, which has yet to open its doors for business.

Mr. Bienvenu, however, would make no commitment to reporters other than that he had told the directors "I am not going to come back here for meetings every week . . . and have clashes all the time."

'Little Monks' Eased Anguish

WASHINGTON (LAT) — There was a warm Tuesday evening last June when President Johnson sat alone in the White House anguished over the possibility that history would record him as the man who started the Third World War.

★ ★ ★

Half a world away, under his orders, American airplanes were making their first strike at the oil dumps in the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong. The raid was fraught with great danger.

Suppose, for example, the bomb load from one of those planes went astray and hit a Soviet freighter in the harbor. An error like that, the president felt, could conceivably bring the two great nuclear super-powers to an exchange of blows.

The president's agitation was apparent to his daughter, Luci, when she and her fiance, Patrick Nugent, returned to the White House from a date.

★ ★ ★

The soon-to-be-married daughter asked her father what the trouble was. He explained that at that very moment, in the mid-morning hours in Vietnam, the attack planes were in the air.

And then, as the story was disclosed Friday, he said to Luci:

"Your daddy may go down in history as having started World War III."

Luci suggested to her father that perhaps prayers to God would help. In fact, she made the specific suggestion that they all go immediately to "my little monks," as the president has since related to friends and associates.

Pat placed a call to the priory of St. Dominic's Church, asking that the church be kept open for a visit sometime between 10:30 p.m. and midnight.

One of the Dominican brothers who maintain the buildings opened the church and at 10:30, Mr. Johnson, Lady Bird, Luci and Pat, accompanied by a carload of secret servicemen, came to the church.

★ ★ ★

They prayed under a grand sculptured Pieta hanging from the ceiling before the main altar. For half an hour, the four were on their knees praying and then they left.
